FRANCE.

The Coming Election—Manifesto of the Republican Journals—A Crisis in Paris—Another Rumor About Clusaret.

PARIS, June 18.—The Republican journals have united in a manifesto to meet the electoral programme put forth by the monarchical Press. They declare that the Republic is the only rational and legitimate expression of the national sovereignty. Monarchy implies its abdication. They will give their support to the candidates who are pledged to maintain the status quo. The Duc DE CHARTRES is a candidate for the Assembly in La Vendée. The French loan will be issued on the 26th inst. if the Assembly passes the bill authorizing it before that date. The Duke of AUMALE is moving into his chateau. The Journal of Paris reports that the Central Committee has been reorganized under the name of the Central Committee of the Federal National Guard, with M. DOMBEROW President, and M. REYNOLDS TICARD Vice-President. Le Vérité says the state of siege will be raised on the 26th. The city is healthy. Count BOURGOING has been appointed Minister to the Hague. A number of natives of Switzerland, taken prisoners during the last days of the insurrection, have been discharged. There is a rumor that CLUSERET is alive and has been arrested. Masses will be said in all the churches of Paris, on Tuesday, for the souls of the victims of the civil war. Crowds of visitors arrive by every train, and business is improving. The German troops have evacuated Chantilly. The Official Journal has a strong article abusing a portion of the English Press for hostility to France. It stigmatizes their misrepresentations as cold blooded and cowardly, and charges that some of the writers were bribed during and since the war.

LONDON, Monday Morning, June 19.—The Times' special dispatches from Paris say: "The Prussians have evacuated Rouen, and 8,000 have left St. Denis and Gonesse. M. ROUHER is expected in Paris."

Minister Washburne's Health—Recruiting Foreigners—Jules Ferry to Succeed M. Trochland.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—Minister WASHBURNE recently obtained leave of absence, which he will avail himself of to spend some time at Carlsbad for the improvement of his health, which has been somewhat impaired by his arduous duties in Paris. He has given much satisfaction to our Government by his official conduct during the late war between France and Prussia. For the past two months the Department of State has issued, on an average, sixty passports a day, many of them to Germans, and a few to Frenchmen, returning to their respective countries. Reliable information has reached here that the French Government has appointed JULES FERRY as Minister to Washington, in place of M. TROCHLAND, who will return to France.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Prof. Montague-Bernard to Enter the Privy Council—Mr. Disraeli and the Opposition—Fenian Raid on an Armory.

LONDON, June 18.—The Observer announces that Prof. MONTAGUE-BERNARD, late of the Joint High Commission, will enter the Privy Council. There is no truth in the reports which have just been revived that DISRAELI is to be deposed from the leadership of the Opposition.

DUBLIN, June 18.—A gang of men, supposed to be Fenians, broke into the militia armory at Mallow on Saturday night and carried off 120 rifles. A sentinel fired upon the men as they were leaving, but all escaped. Some of the arms were discovered this morning in a neighboring field. Five persons have been arrested on suspicion.

GERMANY.

The Visitors in Berlin—Festivities Everywhere—An Operatic Performance at the Palace—Thanksgiving Yesterday.

BERLIN, June 18—Evening.—The troops were entertained yesterday with dinners and dancing everywhere. At the palace there was a state performance of an opera, which was attended through special invitation only. There was a grand display of gorgeous uniforms by the high military authorities. The civil officers occupied the pit, and the diplomatic corps the proscenium boxes. Ladies only occupied the front row, and none except maids of honor the second tier. The Emperor and suite entered at 8 o'clock, amid perfect silence. The Emperor and Empress bowed formally thrice. The Crown Princess, charmingly dressed in a pale silk, and wearing a tiara of diamonds, was seated on the right of the Emperor. Then a galaxy was formed behind them by the Duchess and Princesses. The box was filled with the other Princes Imperial, forming a magnificent spectacle. A prologue was spoken by Fraulein EHRHARDT in panegyric of FREDERICK WILLIAM III. An allegorical piece followed, entitled "Heimkehr," by RODERBURG, with music by ECKERT. At its conclusion the Emperor left his seat. A monologue was then given of the legend of Barbarossa, which was illustrated by tableaux vivants, and closed with the reappearance of the Emperor on horseback, at which the audience rose and shouted "Hoch!" thrice, amid the waving of helmets and great excitement. The Emperor bowed and retired. Today is devoted to thanksgiving in all the churches, which are crowded. The national prayer, composed by the High Consistory, was read in the Cathedral, which was splendidly decorated. The Domchor sang the "Te Deum" magnificently, then its ceremonies concluded.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

The American Policy Sustained by the Hungary Delegation—German Recruits for the Italian Army—The Pope.

VIENNA, June 18.—In the Hungarian delegation last week the Subcommittee, to whom the subject was referred, agreed to recommend a vote of confidence in the Government policy of peace. Prime Minister VON BEUST, addressing the Committee, said the Government harbored no designs against Germany. Austria still kept her representatives at the Courts of the South German sovereigns, but at Prussia's desire. The Austrian Ambassador still remained at Rome with the consent of the Italian Government.

FLORENCE, June 17.—The result of the first levy for the Italian Army in the Roman provinces is satisfactory. King Victor EMMANUEL is going to Naples. On his return he will visit Rome.

BRUSSELS, June 18.—The King and Queen of the Belgians have written to the Pope to congratulate him on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his Pontificate.

MADRID, June 18.—Minister MORET has tendered his resignation to the King. There were slight disturbances during the celebration of the Pope's jubilee.

The Papal Jubilee in Brussels—Violent Anti-Papal Demonstrations.

BRUSSELS, June 18.—The churches and many houses are illuminated, to-night, in honor of the Papal anniversary. But the celebration is attended by some disorder. Violent anti-Papal demonstrations are made by large crowds, who pass through the streets and smash the illuminated windows. The troops still keep within their barracks, but a force of special constables has been called out, and several arrests have been made. The Italian flag is frequently displayed, and large numbers of citizens wear the Italian colors in their buttonholes.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

Another Smash-up on the Grand Trunk Railway—Three Passenger-Cars Destroyed, and Twelve or Fifteen Persons Injured.

TORONTO, June 17.—Another serious railway accident occurred about 4 o'clock yesterday morning near Ernestoin Station, ten miles east of Napanee, on the Grand Trunk Railway, to the express-train going west. The Pullman and two other passenger-cars were thrown off the track by a defective rail, turned over, and rolled down an embankment. Some twelve persons were more or less injured, some of whom were brought to Napanee, and obtained medical assistance. Hopes are entertained of their recovery. The following are among those injured: Edward Daley, of Richmond, seriously; D. Walters, London, Ontario; Mrs. A. Lowrey, Kingston; M. Hoati, Port Hope; C. Vidiam, St. Lawrence County, New-York; Mrs. Vidiam, seriously; James Carruthers, Castleton; Dr. E. F. Beals, Windfield, N. Y.; Thos. Keyes, St. Catharines; A. M. Hammond, England; A. B. Symonds, Perth; W. F. Moore, Chicago; James Armstrong, Westminster, and several others were injured, but their names were not learned. The injured passengers were all able to leave on their journey but EDWARD DALEY, who was badly injured in the back and thigh, and was not able to be moved. Mrs. C. VIDIAN, from near Ogdensburg, and Mrs. A. LOWREY, of Kingston, were both very seriously injured and bruised. They are all under the attendance of Dr. BUTLAND, and he thinks they will recover.

CUBA.

Surrender of Marmol—Probabilities of his Execution.

HAVANA, June 18.—The insurgent Gen. EDUARDO MARMOL, who at the beginning of the revolution raised a band of four hundred negroes in the jurisdiction of Guantanamo, offered to surrender to Gen. PALANCA, at Santiago de Cuba. Gen. PALANCA refused to accept his surrender unless MARMOL brought a certain number of insurgents with him, which the Spanish Government demands as a condition for the pardon of an officer of his rank. MARMOL thereupon went to Cinco de Avila, accompanied by a friend, and surrendered to the Spanish commander. As he came without the prescribed number of men, he will probably be shot.

THE CUBAN CLAIMS.

An Official Memorandum of Arbitration—How Claims are to be Presented—Interesting Data for Claimants and their Heirs.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 18.—The Cuban Claims Commission has printed a memorandum of an arbitration for the settlement of the claims of citizens of the United States or of their heirs against the Government of Spain, for wrongs and injuries committed against their persons and property, or against the persons and property of whom the said heirs are the legal representatives by the authorities of Spain in the Island of Cuba, or within the jurisdiction thereof, since the commencement of the present insurrection. It is understood that a reasonable period shall be allowed for the presentation of the proofs; that all claims, and the testimony in favor of them, shall be presented only through the Government of the United States; that the award made in each case shall be in writing, and if indemnity be given, the sum to be paid shall be expressed in gold coin of the United States. The arbitrators shall have jurisdiction of all claims presented to them by the United States for injuries done to citizens of the United States by the authorities of Spain in Cuba since the 1st day of October, 1868. Adjudications of the tribunals in Cuba concerning citizens of the United States, made in the absence of the parties interested, or in violation of international law, or of the guarantees and forms provided for in the treaty of Oct. 27, 1795, between the United States and Spain, may be reviewed by the arbitrators, who shall make such award in any such case as they shall deem just. No judgment of a Spanish tribunal disallowing the affirmation of a party that he is a citizen of the United States shall prevent the arbitrators from hearing a reclamation presented in behalf of said party by the United States Government. Nevertheless, in any case heard by the arbitrators, the Spanish Government may traverse the allegations of American citizenship, and thereupon competent and sufficient proof thereof will be required. The Commission having recognized the quality of American citizens in the claimants, they will acquire the rights accorded to them by the present stipulations as such citizens.

And it is further agreed that the arbitrators shall not have jurisdiction of any reclamation made in behalf of a native-born Spanish subject, naturalized in the United States, if it shall appear that the same subject matter, having been adjudicated by a competent tribunal in Cuba, and the claimant having appeared therein either in person or by his duly-appointed attorney, and being required by the law of Spain to make a declaration of his nationality, failed to declare that he was a citizen of the United States in such case and for the purposes of this arbitration, it shall be deemed and taken that the claimant by his own default had renounced his allegiance to the United States. And it is further agreed that the arbitrators shall not have jurisdiction of any demands growing out of contracts. The regulations provide, among other things, that in addition to the representation of his claim, and the exhibits or proofs in support thereof, which may have been or shall be presented to or filed in the Department of State of the United States, every claimant shall file in the office of the Commission a statement of his claim in the form of a memorial. Each memorial shall state the particulars of the claim, the general ground on which it is founded under the public international law, and the amount claimed. It shall be verified by the oath of the claimant; or, if the claim be by a firm, or an association of people, by the oath of one of them, or, in the case of a corporation, by the oath of the President, Secretary, or other officer thereof; such oath to be taken, if in the United States, before any officer having power to administer judicial oaths according to the law of the place where administered; and the official character of such officer shall be duly authenticated according to the laws of said place. If such oath be taken without the territory of the United States, it may be administered by the Legation or nearest Consul of the United States. The arbitrators may, in their discretion, order any claimant to answer on oath such interrogatories as may be submitted to the Commission for the purpose by or on behalf of either Government. Every claimant shall be allowed two months' time next following the filing of his memorial, in which to take and file his proofs, and three months next following the same shall be allowed for the taking and filing of proofs on the part of Spain, which respective periods may be prolonged by special order or cause shown. Every deposition taken either in the United States or in Spain or her possessions, shall be taken before some officer competent to administer judicial oaths under the laws of the place, whose official character shall be duly authenticated according to said laws, and such witness shall state whether he is interested directly or indirectly, either in the claim in question, or whether he is agent or attorney for any party interested directly or indirectly therein. After the proofs on the part of Spain shall have been closed and filed, the Commission shall, in every case when the claimant shall desire to take rebutting proof, accord a reasonable time in its discretion for the taking and submitting proof.

Each memorial and all exhibits and proofs shall be filed in original manuscripts, and the same and all matter including briefs and arguments shall be printed at the expense of the party adducing or propounding the same, at least thirty printed copies of each being filed. All cases will be submitted on printed documents, but brief oral explanations will be received at all times from the advocate of either Government. Arguments of special counsel will be received in print, when submitted by the advocate of either Government, and not otherwise. On the first Monday in December next the arbitrators will proceed to call and hear any claim or cases which may be ready for hearing, in conformity with these regulations.

Barometer corrected for elevation and temperature.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 19—1 A. M.—The barometer has fallen since Saturday night on the Pacific Coast, with rising temperature. The low pressure which was over Lake Ontario Sunday night is now central over Connecticut. The barometer after falling rapidly during the day in the Missouri Valley, is now followed by threatening weather west of Michigan and Indiana. Rain has fallen from Virginia to Lake Erie and eastward, but is now confined to the East Atlantic coast. Clear and partially cloudy weather now prevails from Lake Huron to Louisiana, and eastward with light winds. The temperature has risen from Arkansas to Lake Michigan. No reports have been received from the extreme West and Northwest.

PROBABILITIES.

Pleasant weather will probably continue on the Gulf and Atlantic coasts on Monday. Falling of barometer, with cloudy and threatening weather, is probable from the Ohio Valley westward.

Possibial Celebration in New-Orleans—A Brilliant Display.

NEW-ORLEANS, June 18.—The celebration today of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the election to the Pontificate of his Holiness, Pius IX., was the most successful demonstration of the kind ever witnessed in New-Orleans. The procession, which was composed of military and the various Catholic societies, numbered about 15,000, and was several miles in length, requiring two hours to pass a given point. The procession organized on Canal-street, moved down to St. Phillip, up to Julia and thence down to the Cathedral, in front of which, on Charles-street, a platform had been erected. Addresses were delivered in German by Rev. NATHAN GERGEN, in French by Hon. P. E. THEARD, and in English by Hon. T. WHARTON COLLINS in behalf of the laity, after which the Pontifical benediction was given by Archbishop PERCHE to those present. The ceremonies closed with the benediction of the most blessed sacrament. St. Patrick's Church tower and many buildings in the Fourth District were brilliantly illuminated. Illuminations in other sections of the city were omitted at the suggestion of the Archbishop.

WASHINGTON.

The Southern Claims Commission and Its Work.

Seizure of an Illicit Distillery After a Career of Five Years—Personal—The Smugglers on the Canadian Frontier—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The Southern Claims Commission will adjourn for a two months' vacation about the 1st of July, and will reassemble about the middle of September. Thus far nearly 150 cases have been practically decided, and each member of the Commission will take home with him about fifty cases to prepare reports upon during the vacation. Judge ALDIS goes to St. Albans, Judge FRAMPTON to Glen's Falls, N. Y., and Ex-Senator HOWELL to Keokuk, Iowa. The cases practically decided will involve the payment of a sum exceeding $150,000, but it is a gratifying development that the total amount of all the claims is not likely to prove burdensome to the Government, as was feared when the act creating the Commission was passed. A small proportion of the claims, say one-sixth to one-eighth have been absolutely rejected on the ground of disloyalty, and nearly all have been very materially reduced in amount. The number of claims thus far filed is nearly twenty-five hundred, and of these nineteen hundred have been tabulated, and lists of the same have been printed and mailed to every post-office in every county from which claims are returned, to be posted for public inspection, with a request that any person knowing facts in connection with the claims, will please address the Commission. In this way the Commission are in the receipt of great numbers of letters, many of them giving important information. The 1,900 claims thus tabulated are distributed among the several States as follows: Virginia, 239; North Carolina, 234; Georgia, 236; South Carolina, 110; Tennessee, 224; Louisiana, 83; Alabama, 149; Mississippi, 118; Arkansas, 135; Florida, 6; Texas, 6.

REVENUE SEIZURE.

Capt. BROOKS, Special Assistant Internal Revenue Assessor for Virginia, reports to Supervisor PENNEBEY the seizure at Culpepper, on Friday, of an illicit distillery, which has been running with impunity for five years.

PERSONAL.

Among the latest arrivals in the city are Gov. JEWELL of Connecticut, Gov. PERHAM of Maine and Hon. GEORGE A. HALSEY, of New-Jersey. Col. CLIFFORD THOMSON, who, on the accession of Gen. PLEASONTON to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, was appointed Chief of the Division of Supervisors and Detectives, has resigned that position to return to his favorite profession of journalism, in which he has recently formed an unusually fine connection. Col. THOMSON, during his residence here in official position, has won the esteem of a large number of persons in high position, who congratulate him now on his improved prospects.

THE SMUGGLING ON THE NORTHERN FRONTIER.

Some time since it was stated in a dispatch from here that smuggling on the Canadian border of New-York was going on to a great extent, and that merchants were complaining and charging the responsibility upon the Collector at Plattsburg. A careful inquiry discloses the fact that for several months past the proportion of smuggling has been less than for years before, and that the only letter making charges against the Plattsburg Collector emanated from a person who desired his removal.

THE M'GARRAHAN CLAIM.

In case Solicitor SMITH, of the Interior Department, returns before next Wednesday, as is expected, the Secretary of the Interior will give a hearing to an application of McGARRAHAN for the restoration of the record of the Panoche Grande patent as it is alleged it stood before it was mutilated. The application was made to the President and is taken up at his request in the Interior Department. The decision will probably be reserved for some time, but when made it will have but little bearing on the merits of the question as to whom the land belongs. It is expected that the whole case will be opened during the Summer, and a final decision made.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

PENSIONERS OF THE WAR OF 1812.

When the bill providing pensions for the surviving soldiers and sailors of the war of 1812 was under consideration last Winter, its passage was supported by an argument that only a few thousand old veterans survived to claim its benefits. It now appears, from the records of the business of the Pension Bureau, that the number of beneficiaries of the law, and consequent money expenditure, were greatly under-estimated. The number of applications for pensions under the act up to the present time exceeds 26,000, and the average number of new cases received daily is 176. About twenty per cent. of the cases adjudicated are rejected. Estimating from the above data, the total number of admissions to pensions on the 30th of June of next year will be 35,440, and the expenditures for payments to these pensioners, at the rate of $8 per month, from Feb. 14, 1871, will then have amounted to $8,218,546 66. The appropriations available for this purpose amount to $4,740,000. It is possible the admissions and consequent expenditures may be increased above these estimates.

SUICIDE IN THE SMITHSONIAN GROUNDS.

WILLIAM PETERSON, aged fifty-eight years, was found yesterday evening in the Smithsonian Institution Grounds, apparently dying, with a vial labelled "Laudanum" lying near him. When aroused from his stupor he said he always took narcotics when ending a spree. He was taken to the Central Guard-house for treatment, and died during the night. He was the owner and occupant of the house on Tenth-street, nearly opposite to Ford's Theatre, to which President LINCOLN was conveyed after his assassination, and where he died.

THE COREAN DIFFICULTY.

Protection of American Seamen to be Enforced—The Instruction to Admiral Rodgers—Excitement in Hong-Kong.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The reports of the Associated Press give all the information there is here regarding the late troubles at Corea. The State Department received only a brief dispatch from Minister LOW, in which the dispatches of Admiral RODGERS to the Navy Department are referred to for a statement of the facts up to date. Information of a later date is expected very soon. The dispatch of Secretary FISH to Minister LOW, of April 20, 1870, authorized him to negotiate a treaty with the authorities of Corea for the protection of shipwrecked mariners, and should the opportunity seem favorable for obtaining commercial advantages in Corea, he was to include provisions to that effect. Admiral RODGERS received full instructions from the Navy Department, and placed his flag-ship at the disposal of Mr. LOW, who was instructed to exercise prudence and discretion, to maintain firmly the right of the United States to have their seamen protected, and to avoid a conflict by force unless it could not be avoided without dishonor.

HONG KONG, Sunday, June 18, via London, June 18.—The news of the fight between the American expedition and the Coreans causes much excitement among foreigners here. Dispatches from Washington are anxiously looked for, as it is expected that Admiral RODGERS will continue hostile operations unless he receives orders to the contrary.

VALLANDIGHAM DEAD.

Fatal Results of the Wound—Last Scenes—An Interesting Interview.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 17.—Mr. VALLANDIGHAM died at 9:43 this morning. He went down very rapidly after 3 o'clock, having no pulse scarcely after that hour. Dr. DAWSON, of Cincinnati, arrived at 3 o'clock, but was too late to do any good for the dying man. Judge HAYNES, his law partner from Dayton, reached Lebanon this morning, with other personal friends who were with him in his last hours. MCGEHAN, in the prosecution of whom case he lost his life, was taken from jail this morning to the bedside and shed tears as he beheld his dying friend. The Times d'Ornoiale, this evening, publishes an interview had between VALLANDIGHAM and one of the editors on Wednesday, in which VALLANDIGHAM said there can be no more political campaigns fought on the issues of the last few years. They are dead, and if the Democratic Party refuses to move to the front and accept the new order of things, it will rapidly pass away and some other party made up of the earnest and progressive elements of old parties will take possession of the Government. When asked if he did not think the campaign of 1872 would be fought on the present issues, he said, "That may be undertaken by our party, but it will fail. A year ago GRANT gave promise of his intention to lead the Republican Party into a new departure, and he would have done it, but a gang of old politicians at Washington held him back and scared him with gabble about defeat until he went square back into the old party. GRANT is an honest man, and would do right if the politicians would let him, but that they won't do. He took the back track on the San Domingo question, in which, apart from the corrupt means used, he was clearly right. I tell you, Sir, annexation of territory to the control of the contiguous States of this continent is the destiny of the American people. We shall have San Domingo and Cuba, Mexico, and all the rest, mark that. We missed the greatest chance we ever had in not getting Cuba during the Spanish troubles. We could have had it for the asking, and within a few years we could have been owners of the richest and most productive piece of territory in the world. Why, they used to talk about me and call me a disunionist. I tell you Sir, earnestly and honestly, that I never was a disunionist, and that I always did believe and now believe that this Union will be perpetuated and extended until it embraces the continent." In his denial of disunion views VALLANDIGHAM thrice repeated it with marked emphasis. In reply to the remark of the interviewer that he did not see how, with the hatred established toward him by the dead issues of the Democracy, he could stay in that party, he said: "Neither do I, and I don't intend to. The Republican Party won't move forward. It wants to stick to its old clothes, and my best hope is to get the Democracy to push to the front. However, there is no telling what three hundred and sixty-five days may bring forth, and of one thing I am certain—if the Democratic Party will become the party of progress and advanced ideas, and I, from conscientious convictions, decide to act with any other political party, that other political party will never inquire what my past political record has been. Parties do not manage things that way."

How Mr. Vallandigham Received His Death Wound—Public Sentiment.

CINCINNATI, June 18.—From detailed accounts published this morning, it appears Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, with his associate counsel, had been out Friday evening experimenting, with a view of ascertaining how near the muzzle of a pistol could be held to cloth without burning it. The test was made, and they were returning, two balls having been fired from the pistol. MILLIKEN, associate counsel, urged him to discharge the remaining three balls, but VALLANDIGHAM said "No, never mind;" and though MILLIKEN repeated the suggestion, VALLANDIGHAM declined to discharge them, and took the pistol upstairs and laid it beside an empty one which he intended to use in the argument on Saturday. He left it there, the tragedy which followed. The Enquirer, this morning, pronounces his loss to the Democratic Party of Ohio almost irreparable. A public meeting will be held to-morrow in the Board of Trade rooms, to take action in regard to his death and funeral.

Removal of the Remains to Dayton, Ohio—Preparations for the Funeral.

DAYTON, Ohio, June 18.—The remains of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM reached this city last evening at 6 o'clock. A heavy rain interfered with the reception contemplated, but the remains, nevertheless, were met by members of the Masonic fraternity and personal friends, and escorted to his late residence. Mrs. VALLANDIGHAM, who is almost crushed by the double loss of her husband and brother, reached Dayton this evening by special train. The funeral will take place Tuesday afternoon under the direction of the Masons. Persons who have seen the remains today say that decomposition has brought considerable change since yesterday. During the day a large number of persons from the city and surrounding country visited the house, but did not view the remains, in consequence of the advanced stage of decomposition. Profound sympathy for the bereaved family is universally expressed. The Bee will hold a meeting to-morrow. Dispatches from Cincinnati, Columbus and other cities, indicate a large attendance at the funeral. The political friends of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, in this county, will attend almost en masse.

FISK'S JUBILEE.

The New-York Ninth in Boston—Fisk Apologizes for an Unintentional Discourtesy to the Mayor.

BOSTON, June 18.—Today has furnished a strong contrast to the glorious weather of yesterday, a cold north-easterly rain having set in shortly after midnight, which still continues. The anticipated out-door religious services and dress parade of the New-York Ninth Regiment were, in consequence, not so held. Services, however, took place in the Boston Theatre, which was filled. Rev. Mr. FLAGG, Chaplain of the regiment, officiated. At the close of the religious services Col. FISK made an address. He expressed thanks for the hearty welcome extended to his regiment by the citizens of Boston, and returned with pride to the excellent conduct of his men, which was deserving of such manifestations. The omission of the regiment to salute the Mayor and the City Government on the march yesterday, he said, was owing to the short notice given that it was expected, affording him only time to inform his staff, which, with their Colonel, paid the proper salute. He desired thus publicly to apologize for the apparent breach of courtesy, which was purely accidental. In conclusion, Col. FISK said he hoped to enjoy, with his regiment, several excursions during the Summer, and that their experience in Boston led him to anticipate and hope for an early opportunity to repeat the visit. The regiment left for home about 8 o'clock. A large crowd, including the members of the several city military organizations and prominent citizens, gathered at the depot, and the regiment departed amid hearty cheers and good wishes. The discipline and gentlemanly deportment of the officers and members receive unqualified commendation in all quarters. The people of Charlestown are especially warm in their praises, as much of the success of the 17th of June celebration was owing to its participation. The fine military band also shares equally in the encomiums bestowed upon the regiment. King's balloon, which ascended from Charlestown as a feature of the 17th celebration, descended in three hours after in East Kingston, N. H. Mr. KING was accompanied by Mr. HOLDEN, of the Boston Journal.

Prince Bismarck's Speech and Its Effect —Parliament and the New Provinces— The Return of the Troops—Early Receptions—The Empire and the Commune—The Cession of Heligoland.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BERLIN, Saturday, June 3, 1871.

Prince BISMARCK's violent speech in Parliament, apropos of the government of Alsace and Lorraine, has produced a fierce controversy between the liberal and conservative Press. It was fortunate for Government that Parliament did not allow itself any Whitsuntide vacations, for the discontent prevailing among the Liberal Deputies would certainly have been dissipated ever the country by their stirring among their constituents. The severest censure comes from the south, where public feeling is most demonstrative, and opinion is not used to the official fetters of the colder north. The speech, it will be remembered, represented a protest against the supposed encroachments of Parliament on the Imperial prerogative in the government of the new provinces. The period of Imperial dictatorships was restricted, the Chancellor was made partially responsible, and the public expenditure subject not to the decision but to the sanction of Parliament. It was, moreover, particularly observed that the present was regarded merely as a provisional and exceptional arrangement, and that at the earliest opportunity Alsace and Lorraine were to be placed on a par with other German provinces. Prince BISMARCK was away at Frankfort at the time, and neither his Vicegerent, M. VON DELBRUCK, nor any of his subordinates, opposed the amendments. Parliament persuaded itself that it had acted in perfect harmony with the Chancellor's views. The greater was its surprise at the violent language, bordering closely on the unparliamentary, which M. BISMARCK showered upon it on his return, when the report came before the House. The resolution, he maintained, was a vote of want of confidence, Parliament was curtailing his rights beyond what was just, it was penning him in like the cattle-plague, &c., if Parliament persisted, he must request His Majesty to appoint another Minister. Messrs. VON KARDORFF and LASKER, representing respectively the Liberal Conservative and National Liberal interest, therefore the great majority of the House, at once rose to disclaim all hostile intention. They had not known what the Chancellor's wishes were, but if the latter would kindly inform them, they were ready to give them their unreserved support. This amendment removed all peril of a rupture, and restored M. BISMARCK's good humor, but it cast a gloom over the left side of the House, and has constantly proved a check to the patriotic ardor hitherto manifested by the Liberal Deputies. The wound would easily have scarred over were it not for the chimney criticism and comments of the official Press, especially the North German Gazette and Provincial Correspondence, for which the dispute supplied an inviting topic, and which have aroused the Liberal Press from its patriotic lethargy and made it to stand up as a man for constitutional liberty. The more independent journals indignantly denounce Government's intention of reintroducing the absolutism of ten years ago, the moderate organs defend their party brethren, M. BISMARCK's charges, and hint that the Chancellor will find it easier to rule them by gentleness than by open defiance and brute force. All, however, protest against BISMARCK's language, and even such very Bismarckian papers as the National Zeitung consider it their duty to administer to the great statesman a serious reproof, and to suggest that his head must have been turned by extraordinary successes and by the homage he has received from the whole country. The South Germans, who well remember the time when Prince BISMARCK was their enemy instead of their friend, are most outspoken: they begin to doubt his sincerity, and publicly ask: "Is this the same BISMARCK who has led us to unity and glory, who has promised us liberty, the BISMARCK of Königgrätz, of Versailles and Frankfort, the boasted prince of peace?" The more thoughtful even begin to consider the question if M. BISMARCK is made all in all, if Parliament openly confesses that it will rather support his wishes than act in obedience to its own better convictions. What is to become of the country when he is no more there to direct its destinies? Is not his personal government going rather too far? It cannot be doubted that this storm of open discontent and expressed and hidden doubt will blow over, and that harmony will soon again set its seal on the proceedings of the German Parliament. M. BISMARCK would not be M. BISMARCK, if he did not take warning from the resistance that he has himself provoked, and he has it in his power to reconcile his temporary adversaries by a very slight effort. The controversy, however, speaks well for the progress which the German people is making in political and constitutional independence, and proves that it is no more the people of the Carlsbad Conferences.

THE RETURN OF THE TROOPS.

The return of the German armies from France seems to progress more favorably than was originally expected. The conveyance of such large numbers of men and the guns, ammunition, provisions, medical columns, &c., belonging to them is necessarily a great tax on the railway companies, and the ordinary traffic is on some lines entirely suspended for the time. But the removal goes off more smoothly and quietly by far than that in the opposite direction did nine or ten months ago. The French Government is aiding the German dispositions to the best of its powers. It is carefully punctual in its payments, a virtue duly appreciated here. The irregularities occurring in the first period of the Communist war are easily accounted for and readily forgiven, and since the middle of last month the French have been regularly in advance of the stipulated terms. This is the more meritorious, as the money is anyhow being paid in advance. Gen. VON FABRICE's commencement of payment of the money due on 1st June reached us some days before that date, so that the French must have paid it about a week before time. The more punctually M. THIERS pays, the more willing does M. BISMARCK appear to relieve France of its unwieldsome and onerous burden. Orders have now been issued, in obedience to which the numbers of the German army of occupation will be, by the 15th inst., reduced to three hundred thousand men or less, where a few days ago it numbered five hundred thousand; for the maintenance of them payment has been made. The Guards, the Fifth and Seventh Corps are partially in Germany already, and the Second Bavarian Corps, the Ninth Corps and the Wurtemburg Division are to be in Germany by the 18th inst. The rate per diem being one and three-fourths francs for every man, and two and one-half francs for every horse, the saving may easily be computed as very considerable to the French exchequer. The payment of money for the maintenance of the Germans is made in French paper currency at par, all being spent in France. It is issued also at par, and wonderfully enough has maintained that rate in business. The Germans are very careful not to import it into their own country. The Corps of Guards began its homeward march yesterday, and by the 12th inst. all its regiments, excepting the siege artillery, are to be encamped in the plain between Potsdam, Tietberbogh and Brandenburg, whence they will march into Berlin on the 16th. The siege artillery is to remain in France some time; it is at present at St. Denis.

EARLY RECEPTIONS.

We hear most of the return of the Fifth Army Corps, which has repeatedly distinguished itself by gallant deeds and patient endurance during the campaign. Its regiments were the first to re-enter German territory, and were accordingly fêted wherever they showed themselves. Notwithstanding the inconvenient time of their arrival at Carlsruhe, viz., between 1 and 3 A. M., the men were most hospitably and enthusiastically received at that city, the first German capital that they passed. The trains are pouring in since last Saturday. At Bamberg great preparations were made for their reception as a proof of Bavarian hospitality. The little Kingdom of Saxony outstrips all its fellow States in the liberality of reception accorded to the Posen Contingent, being for the greater part of Poles. Both at Leipsic and at Dresden the civic authorities assembled at the stations to receive the victors of Wissembourg, Woerth, Sedan and Paris. Prussian Generals have often affirmed that the Poles make their best soldiers, and the late campaign bears out this assertion. Their reception in Saxony, the former head-quarters of the Slavonic tribes in Germany, was enthusiastic. Young ladies in white had arrayed themselves on the platform, waving laurel boughs, with which they decked the helmeted heads and shouldered chests of the returning soldiers, while others served out refreshments, provided by patriotic committees, at whose head stands the well-known musical firm of BREITKOPF & HARTEL. The Seventh Grenadiers (the King's Own) and the Fifth Rifles, henceforth to be called the Emperor's Rifles, regiments who have specially distinguished themselves, were received with the greatest display. The entire corps returns in sixty-six railway trains. It is of course to take part in the triumphal entry on the 16th, which, though predicted again and again, and fixed at first for the beginning of May, seems still to take our towns people by surprise. It is said that, in consequence of the shortness of time allowed for preparation, much that had been planned will have to be omitted. The Emperor, now taking the waters as usual at Badenweiler, will return to Berlin on the 16th, in order to be present, and Prince ALBERT of Saxony, the distinguished leader of the Fourth Army, will likewise attend. The City of Berlin has voted a credit of 110,000 thalers and a reserve fund of 20,000 thalers for the decoration of the town. Every landwehrman who is a native of Berlin taking part in the entry, is to receive a donation of five thalers but of the city exchequer, and every widow of men belonging to the same class, twenty thalers, a liberality which is to be extended to men and widows of other corps also. The squares and principal streets are being decorated with flags and the skeleton-work of a most artistically got-up system of wreaths and garlands. In the most fashionable street, "Unterden Linden," tableaux are to be put up representing the principal incidents of the late war and commemorating the most decisive victories. The paintings are now in preparation. In the "Linden Promenade," double rows are being placed of captured guns. Other trophies, such as captured colors, &c., are to be borne in front of the procession. The via triumphalis will close at the statue of King FREDERICK. The Emperor and his Court and staff will post themselves at the foot of the Blücher statue to witness the march past. The other German sovereigns are to attend their chief. Only two stands are being erected, one near the Halle Gate for the councillors of Berlin; the other on the Pars-square, for members of the German and Prussian Parliament and military and civil authorities. Sufficient room will, however, be left for spectators on the flags on both sides of the streets. Grandstands and roofing over the more thoroughfares promise to yield their owners an abundant harvest, windows let fair on an average for the rent otherwise paid for an stage. A great number of young ladies are setting up their white toilettes and laurel wreaths—the costume in which they are to join the Kriegsmarsch—and Prussian Pilsen inn-keepers, brewers and wine-merchants are laying in a stock of liquor to be distributed among the sons of Mars. Now that the 16th is definitely settled as the day of the martial solemnity, orders for rooms at the hotels of all orders continue to pour in by hundreds, as if the whole world were coming to hold a meeting here. There is a great number of Americans among the applicants. Such as have not ordered quarters already will probably have to do without, there being hardly a garret that is not already bespoken. The martial pageant is to be followed by a thanksgiving service and religious festivity, on the 18th and 19th, the former being a band of patriotic and military service, the latter a general German holiday.

GERMANY AND THE COMMUNE.

The question of the extradition of Communist refugees is engrossing the attention of our authorities, as it is that of the neighboring Governments. It is the disadvantage of Liberal institutions that they attract political refugees and good-for-nothings from all quarters of the globe, and of England and Belgium will be the most favored places of refuge of these Communist firebrands, and we shall suffer comparatively little inconvenience. The decisions of neighboring countries are watched by our Government with care, but will hardly interfere with its own predetermined measures. We cannot do with rebels and revolutionists in Prussia, and if they are not to be got rid of in deference to the wishes of M. THIERS, our Police may be trusted with detecting other reasons for banishing them. Austria has declared her intention to uphold the provisions of the Extradition Treaty to the very letter, which is not saying very much, for it means no more than that Government will refuse to give up offenders of non-political crimes. Her good-will to rid herself of the troublesome set, should they come over, can, however, be as little doubted as that of the Northern Confederation. Extradition of political offenders, merely for their political crimes, will be hardly resorted to in neither country, but it will be virtually observed.

THE CESSION OF HELIGOLAND.

A rumor is circulating in our Press of the German Government having again proposed to England the cession of Heligoland, as against a pecuniary composition. This rumor is more than a sensational canard, though it can hardly lead to any serious result. Neither in England nor here has it met with an official confirmation, but as little with a denial. It could hardly be expected that either Government should lend the proposal the support of its authorization, unless the arrangement were finally concluded. But, whether M. BISMARCK has made the definite proposal or not, our Government is indisputably anxious to have Heligoland, and the present is considered an exceptionally favorable time for mooting the scheme. The population of Heligoland is German, and the island is considered a piece of Germany by the entire country. We are in a specially patriotic humor at present for uniting all Germanic races in the bonds of a political confederation, and the acquisition would be hailed as a trophy. Heligoland is of naval importance, both to Germany and to England, and to the former it would appear an earnest of greater maritime power, not only in itself, but also relatively, by weakening England. The loss of Heligoland would impair English influence in the North Sea, and strengthen that of the Eastern Powers, Russia and Germany, more particularly when the Kiel Canal, uniting the North Sea with the Baltic, and shortening the route from the Baltic by several days, will be completed. England, on the other hand, is not expected to attach great value to the possession of Heligoland; it might, however, be happy to reconcile German opinion, still very hostile to "perfidious Albion." If this supposition the Germans have evidently miscalculated the opinion of John Bull, who would cede Heligoland to any other nation rather than to Germany, and whose fondness for his small island is undemonstrative, but none the less tenacious. I am satisfied that the proposal has been, if not mooted, yet considered, and intentionally brought before the public by the Prussian Government.

THE COMMUNE'S WORK.

How the Destruction of Paris Was Planned—Fire versus Troops—Extent of the Success.

Correspondence London Times.

It may well be supposed that it was from sinister design that those various preparations of which we have heard arose—mines in the sewers, wires intended for their ignition by means of electric batteries placed at Montmartre. But there was never anything serious about these preparations. If any quantity of explosive materials has been found in the sewers, the batteries intended to ignite them have never been in a condition to do so. It was the same with those famous mines which were to be placed in front of the barricades. Not one of those mines was exploded; they never had existence, save in the columns of the Communalist Journal Officiel, where they appeared as a menace to produce hesitation among the soldiers, and to mask the real designs of the Communes. Petroleum was the real instrument which it had determined to employ. Even before the last moments of its agony, the Commune had taken its measures to effect its object. It had taken forcible possession of all inflammable oils, and especially petroleum. In the last few days of the struggle the Committee of Public Safety was everything, the Commune was nothing. The Committee of Public Safety had completely abandoned the military arrangements to the Central Committee of the Federation of the National Guard," and reserved to itself the incendiary arrangements; but both branches of the defense were connected, and DELESCLUZE stood between them as a sort of dictator.

THE INCENDIARIES' ORGANIZATION.

A document which was found upon him after his death leaves little doubt of the important part which was played in extremis by this king of the Jacobins, and of the special character which the Committee of Public Safety had assumed. This document, very valuable as an item for history, says:

"Citizen MILLIERE, at the head of 120 fusee bearers, will see fire to the suspected house and public monuments on the left bank. Citizen DARDENNE with 100 fusees is to act in the First and Second Arrondissements. Citizen BILOCHE, with 100 men, is to take charge of the Ninth, Tenth and Twentieth Arrondissements. Citizen VARLIN, with fifty men, is specially charged with the Boulevards from the Mille then to the Bastile. The citizens must concert with the commanders of barricades to insure the execution of these orders.—Paris, 3 Pratrial, A.M. 79."

This document is signed by the members of the Committee of Public Safety, at the head of whom stands the name of DELESCLUZE. Thus there was a band of fusées organized in the dark, and of whom no mention was ever made by the Journal Officiel, to whom was intrusted the burning of Paris, and who doubtless had long studied their field of action. Some indiscretions caused this plan to become known, but no one would believe it. These fusées, under the direction of a scientific committee composed of medical men and practical chemists, proposed various contrivances, matches and other means of producing explosions. Barrels of powder and of petroleum were placed in the monuments destined to destruction, and at the points where incendiarism was intended. It must be observed that the chiefs who were charged with carrying out these abominable orders of the Committee of Public Safety were to make arrangements in concert with the commanders of barricades, who were under the orders of the Central Committee. "Blow up or burn the houses which interfere with your plan of defense," wrote DELESCLUZE and BILLIORAY to DOMBROWSKI, in an order which has been found. "The barricades ought not to be assailable from the houses." Thus a rampart of burnt houses was to be formed. The same citizens again wrote to VARLIN HOOVER, commanding the barricade of the Faubourg du Temple: "The citizen delegate commanding at the Barrack of the Chateau d'Eau is requested to deliver to the bearer of this present the barrels of mineral oil required by the citizen the General-in-Chief of the barricades of the Faubourg du Temple." There was between incendiarism and the defence a previously established connection.

WOMAN'S SHARE.

No document as yet found has thrown any light on the organization of the pétroleuses, of which so much has been said. This corps existed only in imagination of journalists, but it cannot be doubted that many women were found upon the barricades and among the fusées to assist in their accursed task. Many, induced by a hope of plunder, went to work upon their own account, and largely contributed to spread fire throughout the city. An appeal had been made to women, and a certain number were organized in military fashion. I saw at Versailles a "colonelle," who bore not only the gold lace indicating her rank, but also the emblems of an infirmière, the red Geneva Cross. At Paris she was a combatant; at Versailles she was the chief of the infirmières. When the women of the popular quarters had in the later days become masters of the city, the National Guards no longer went alone to their posts. Their wives, "legitimate or otherwise," as the Communes said, accompanied them. The family was installed in palaces or private houses, the best and most comfortable apartments being selected. Scouts were sent in every neighborhood to obtain money, jewels, silk dresses, provisions and wine, and all led a jovial life, wanting nothing. An eye-witness residing in the Rue Rivoli, facing the gate de l'Echelle of the Tuileries, informed me that on the day when the palace was set on fire he saw a woman in Scottish plaid, seated on the Place de l'Hôtel de Ville, with a bottle of champagne in her hand, and the National Guards come out of the building. It was a o'clock in the evening, and in the dark he saw them issue forth in squads with drooping heads. Behind them came a troop of middle-aged women, also appearing depressed; and still later them came another body of women, younger, and dressed, and excited by drink, doubtless by the "illegitimate wives," shouting and singing. Some of the men in authority followed. One, losing his patience, exclaimed, "Be off now, quickly, it is time." In an instant later the fire, which had begun at o'clock by the ignition of 10 mitrailleuses with barrels of petroleum, burst forth in all parts with irresistible fury, and, communicating with the fire-works which had been placed in different parts of the palace, blew off the roofs and brought down the walls. The incendiaries had hoped that the explosion would also bring down the houses facing the palace; but, strange to say, the great stories of the city, would that have been rendered impassable for the troops.

THE LINE OF DEFENCE.

Such, in short, was the plan upon all the points of the defence. In front wherever the troops had to pass, and to raise upon the abandoned barricades other barricades of burning ruins, and thus to render attack impossible and retreat easy. The rapidity with which the army of Versailles entered Paris, and the energy displayed in the method of attack, and especially in turning the position of the enemy, have many thwarted, in a great measure, these infernal projects; but if anyone will follow upon the map of Paris the combined work of defence and conflagration, it will be seen that wherever the insurrection was in retreat it left a burning brand to cover it. Upon the left bank, where the insurrection began, it was the last to yield. The troops, on their side, had to fight hard, and they had raised between themselves and the army a barrier of flame, at the same time retaining their means of retreat toward the German forces, from whom they hoped to meet with some connivance.

RIGHT BANK.

Upon the right bank the plan was traced in lines of flame in a still more evident manner. We must not judge alone from what was burnt, but we must consider what it was sought to burn. The great thoroughfares, the strategic roads opened by the Empire, were to be barred, not only by barricades, but were to be flanked by masses of fire. In order to prevent the great barricades of the Rue Royale from being turned, a barrier of fire was to be raised in the Rue Boissy d'Anglas, which runs parallel to it, in the Rue Faubourg St. Honoré, which is also at right angles, and also in the Rue St. Honoré, when retreat should become necessary. The Rue Royale was to be barred by the burning and falling houses, as it would also be the Rue de Rivoli at several points, first at the Ministère des Finances, then by the Palace of the Tuileries, and further on by the Bibliothèque du Louvre, by the Palais Royale, and by the two great blocks of houses which adjoin, and which could not fail to catch fire. In fact, the fire did not extend, but upon the line of retreat a fire was kindled at the corner of the Place de Louvre, and at the corner of the Rue St. Martin, where some new houses have been utterly destroyed. The Avenue Victoria, which leads to the Hôtel de Ville, was also set on fire; The Theatre Lyrique was burnt, the Theatre du Chatelet set on fire, but the fire was extinguished, and in the Ile de la Cité, the flames, rising above the Palais de Justice and the Prefecture de Police, destroyed not only the records of the crimes committed by the insurgent bandits and the sanctuary of justice which they abhorred, but thus also closed the road which connected the Boulevard St. Michel with the Boulevard Sebastopol, the great artery which traverses old Paris in its breadth. If the public monuments on both sides of the river did not intercept their course above the heads of the defenders of order, it was not from any want of will on the part of the incendiaries, for the Cathedral of Notre Dame contained powder and petroleum.

THE BOULEVARD LINE.

The line of the great boulevards remained intact as far as the Château d'Eau, because there was no time to organize resistance upon these points. Montmartre, fired in the night of Monday, was carried from its rear on Tuesday morning by a rapid coup de main. This was the salvation of the Quarter of the Chaussée d'Antin, and of the whole Ninth Arrondissement. But the Madeleine was condemned; so were the Jockey Club, the Grand Hotel, the old Opera-house, the Mairie in the Rue Drouot. At the Château d'Eau the insurgents had made a pièce de résistance, the access to which was from the Boulevard St. Martin and the Boulevard Magenta. Being again taken in rear by the Rue de Turbigo, they retired, after attempting to set fire to the Church of St. Eustache. The insurgents did not abandon the place until they had surrounded it with flame, the Theatre of the Porte St. Martin being the advanced point of the conflagration. Being driven back toward the Faubourg St. Antoine, they covered themselves on the left by the fire of the Magasins Généraux at La Villette; and when at last they had nothing more to burn they defended themselves furiously, foot by foot, in the Cemetery of Père la Chaise. But even thence they again sought to rekindle the fires in Paris by means of petroleum bombs. They then destroyed simply from a desire to destroy; they could no longer hope to check those who were pursuing them amid the tombs, but they never ceased their efforts at destruction—the only result which the Commune of Paris in 1871 has sought to achieve!

THE INTERNATIONAL.

Some Account of the Society and of its Theories and Extent.

Paris Correspondence London Times.

The universal expressions of sympathy which the disasters of Paris have elicited from the whole civilized world have contributed largely to reconcile so sensitive a race to their misfortunes, and they also seem to derive some consolation from the fact that they have been the means of unmasking the International. I have before me an elaborate account of this society, from which it would appear that, although only nine years have elapsed since its foundation, it counts forward of 2,500,000 members. But even this does not include all the affiliated societies which are associated in their various political and revolutionary enterprises by the International, and which comprise the Fenians, the Marianne, the Brothers of the Republic of Lyons and Marseilles, the numerous secret societies of Spain and Poland, and the Carbonari generally all over Europe. The Central Committee of this Association, which has a branch in America, is in London, and its presiding spirit is a German, who conceived the idea of organizing in Berlin, in a definite and tangible form, the theory of BABOUVIST Communism, JACOBI, PROUDHON, and others. There is no President, but the central office is composed of a Secretary-General and fifteen members. Each country composes a branch of the association. Each branch is divided into sections. Each important centre is subdivided into other sections, with a central bureau. Every week each central bureau sends to the London office 1, detailed report on the political and commercial events of the neighborhood; 2, a statement of additional members; 3, a financial statement; 4, a statement by name of the principal merchants and tradesmen; 5, a statement by name of the principal proprietors and capitalists; six copies of minutes of meetings held. There are, of course, many other secret rules regarding the expulsion of members and the means of pressure to be employed in cases of strikes, &c., which I have no means of obtaining; but it will appear from the above that the organization is one conceived on a scale capable of inducing extensive expansion, and appealing to the sympathies of the largest and most populous place of the community in all countries. The catastrophe of Paris, so far from operating as a check to its growth, will probably give it a powerful impetus, as, unhappily, the more infamous the notoriety of such an association becomes the more attractive will it prove to that large section of society over which the celebrity exercises an irresistible fascination. It is to be regretted that there should also be a large class of persons with such singularly perverted notions that they conscientiously believe the reformation of humanity can only be worked out by slaughter and incendiarism on a vast scale. Such men, for instance, as Dr. MAYO, COURNET, and many others of the leaders of the late movement, one of the most sanguinary of whom—MILLIERE, who had probably ordered the execution of more innocent persons than any of his colleagues—when he was shot, shouted with his last breath, "Vive l'Humanité!" Thus may the "enthusiasm of humanity" inverted become absolutely fatal to it. The philanthropic ideas of LEFRANCAIS, also an honest enthusiast, took another form; he advocated the burning of all the public buildings in Paris in order to erect on their places, would also have been destroyed. Obliged to retreat rapidly, the insurrectionary chiefs delayed the march of the troops by burning the Conseil d'Etat, the archives of the Cour des Comptes, the Palace of the Legion of Honor, the barracks of the Quai d'Orsay, the Caisse de Dépôts, a whole range of houses in the Rue de Lille, between the Rue de Bellechasse and the Rue du Bac; and by setting fire to the Rue du Bac itself, which is close to the Pont Royal, cut off that important passage from the troops, and rendered that artery of the Faubourg St. Germain impracticable. The soldiers could only reach the qual by passing through small cross streets. But upon this side also, it was necessary to avoid the outturning movement of two columns, one of which had reached the Mont Parnasse Railway station, and which by the Rue de Rennes and the Rues Cherche Midi and Sèvres threatened to take in rear the insurrectionary forces. The latter, therefore, would have burnt down the Palais de l'Institut, the Bibliotheque Mazarin, the houses in the Carrefour de la Croix Rouge, and the angles of Rue de Rennes, if they could. The attempt was made, but did not succeed. The fire began at the Institut, but it was extinguished immediately. The Croix Rouge was in flames, and upon the barricade formed at this point the insurgents set the remains of four houses. The Rue Vaugirard was another important communication to be blocked. The Luxembourg, the barrack in the Rue de Tournon, and the Odeon Theatre were to be burnt. By so doing the Pantheon, a citadel of the Commune, would be covered. Attempts were made to execute this design, but without success, and in their disappointment the "friends" blew up the powder magazines situated in the old orchard between the Palace and the Observatory. The explosion was formidable, but it did not do the mischief that was expected; the streets remained open, and the army continued its advance. It had near, reached the limits of Paris on this side of the river. The Pantheon might delay it, but the Pantheon once taken, the troops could gain the Jardin des Plantes, and passing the Seine would turn the insurgents' rear, and inclose within an armed grasp the last remaining of the insurrection. The fusées having failed at this point to set fire to the scientific monuments and the schools which abound in that quarter, the fire of Fort Bicêtre, which still remained in the hands of the insurgents, was opened upon them, and petroleum bombs were thrown into those buildings. Every one of these districts are to be seen traces of these incendiary projectiles, the cupola of the Pantheon alone being struck by five or six. Happily none produced the intended effect, and the Quartier Latin was saved. The Museum, the schools, the Hospital of La Pitié, the Orleans railway station were spared, and the army, now about to cross the river, but immediately before it on the right bank, a fresh fire broke out, one more vast than any yet seen. It was the Grenier d'Abondance, with its contents—corn, flour, dried fish, clothing, gunpowder, saltpetre and petroleum. This was an immense conflagration, an unappeasable hunger, a thirst threatened to swallow up all the buildings in the neighborhood should the wind spring up. The wind was still, and a portion of the quarter was spared. But all these fires had not failed to retard the progress of the troops, and instead of the insurgents being inclosed in a circle of fire or driven upon the cavalry division which guarded the suburbs on this side, it was the insurgents who had raised between themselves and the army a barrier of flame, at the same time retaining their means of retreat toward the German forces, from whom they hoped to meet with some connivance.

RIGHT BANK.

Upon the right bank the plan was traced in lines of flame in a still more evident manner. We must not judge alone from what was burnt, but we must consider what it was sought to burn. The great thoroughfares, the strategic roads opened by the Empire, were to be barred, not only by barricades, but were to be flanked by masses of fire. In order to prevent the great barricades of the Rue Royale from being turned, a barrier of fire was to be raised in the Rue Boissy d'Anglas, which runs parallel to it, in the Rue Faubourg St. Honoré, which is also at right angles, and also in the Rue St. Honoré, when retreat should become necessary. The Rue Royale was to be barred by the burning and falling houses, as it would also be the Rue de Rivoli at several points, first at the Ministère des Finances, then by the Palace of the Tuileries, and further on by the Bibliothèque du Louvre, by the Palais Royale, and by the two great blocks of houses which adjoin, and which could not fail to catch fire. In fact, the fire did not extend, but upon the line of retreat a fire was kindled at the corner of the Place de Louvre, and at the corner of the Rue St. Martin, where some new houses have been utterly destroyed. The Avenue Victoria, which leads to the Hôtel de Ville, was also set on fire; The Theatre Lyrique was burnt, the Theatre du Chatelet set on fire, but the fire was extinguished, and in the Ile de la Cité, the flames, rising above the Palais de Justice and the Prefecture de Police, destroyed not only the records of the crimes committed by the insurgent bandits and the sanctuary of justice which they abhorred, but thus also closed the road which connected the Boulevard St. Michel with the Boulevard Sebastopol, the great artery which traverses old Paris in its breadth. If the public monuments on both sides of the river did not intercept their course above the heads of the defenders of order, it was not from any want of will on the part of the incendiaries, for the Cathedral of Notre Dame contained powder and petroleum.

THE BOULEVARD LINE.

The line of the great boulevards remained intact as far as the Château d'Eau, because there was no time to organize resistance upon these points. Montmartre, fired in the night of Monday, was carried from its rear on Tuesday morning by a rapid coup de main. This was the salvation of the Quarter of the Chaussée d'Antin, and of the whole Ninth Arrondissement. But the Madeleine was condemned; so were the Jockey Club, the Grand Hotel, the old Opera-house, the Mairie in the Rue Drouot. At the Château d'Eau the insurgents had made a pièce de résistance, the access to which was from the Boulevard St. Martin and the Boulevard Magenta. Being again taken in rear by the Rue de Turbigo, they retired, after attempting to set fire to the Church of St. Eustache. The insurgents did not abandon the place until they had surrounded it with flame, the Theatre of the Porte St. Martin being the advanced point of the conflagration. Being driven back toward the Faubourg St. Antoine, they covered themselves on the left by the fire of the Magasins Généraux at La Villette; and when at last they had nothing more to burn they defended themselves furiously, foot by foot, in the Cemetery of Père la Chaise. But even thence they again sought to rekindle the fires in Paris by means of petroleum bombs. They then destroyed simply from a desire to destroy; they could no longer hope to check those who were pursuing them amid the tombs, but they never ceased their efforts at destruction—the only result which the Commune of Paris in 1871 has sought to achieve!

MARRIAGES AND BIRTHS.

Some Curious Facts About Metropolitan Life—Figures for the Year 1870.

Among other valuable items furnished by the annual reports of the New-York Board of Health, are the figures of the Bureau of Vital Statistics. These give but a partial idea of what is aimed at, i. e., the total and correct number of marriages, births and deaths, with dates, ages and nativities of the persons enumerated. The law requiring all officials, civil and ecclesiastical, to record marriages performed by them, has been very generally ignored. In some cases, the ministers of certain persuasions decline to comply with a law which (as they allege) invades the sacredness of a religious ordinance.

The extent of such non-compliance may be adduced from the single instance of the figures enumerating the total of marriages to be 7,045 for the year 1870. That is a palpable inaccuracy, as a moment's calculation must show. Several suits against these contumacious clergymen have been commenced, and it is their intention to follow the matter up hereafter in every case. The interests of science, law and order, seem to imperatively demand it. The table of births is about as faulty, from various causes, of which that in relation to those born out of wedlock is most prominent. The total given is 14,824.

All these statistics are—even in an incomplete form—valuable and interesting. They not only furnish a great deal of important information for scientific purposes, but suggest many curious speculations upon human character and existence, and reveal many of the hidden secrets of this world of metropolitan life.

The marriage registry gives the age, nativity and color of the contracting parties. The largest number of marriages for month was 1,645, in November; the smallest was 451, during the month of December. There were two miscegenations. There were 5,471 males and 4,848 females of foreign birth; 2,370 males and 2,200 females native born, and 1 males and 1 female who were born upon the seas. Of first marriages, there were 6,822 of men and 6,604 of women, showing that 82 widows secured bachelors. Of second marriages, there were 1,047 men and 907 women. Of third marriages there were 64 men and 19 women. Only two men appear on the list of the fourth marriages, no women seeming to have undertaken the fourth nuptial experiment. The age of the parties in the majority of these cases was between twenty and twenty-five. But 71 males and 1,419 females were under twenty. There were 2,858 males and 1,816 females between twenty-five and thirty; 1,365 males and 688 females between thirty and thirty-five, 801 males and 323 females between thirty-five and forty, 19 males and 2 females between forty-five and fifty, 4 males and 2 females between fifty and fifty-five, 18 males and no females between sixty and sixty-five, 10 males between seventy and eighty, and 1 male between eighty and ninety.

The registry of births is an interesting study, notwithstanding the inaccuracy of the figures. The color of 14,353 was white, and that of 169 black; 7,560 were males, and 6,910 females; 9,252 were of foreign, and 2,553 of native parentage, of which 1,449 were fishers' sons, for Newfoundland. The other figures if correct and full would be immense, and the resolution of the authorities to enforce the law with its full penalties against all who fail to comply with it, is most commendable. The mode of arriving, identity, particularly in marriages, is frequently in dispute in the courts where vast interests are at stake, and this record, if thoroughly kept, would be of almost inestimable importance.

YACHTING.

Brooklyn Yacht Club Regatta—Amended Regulations.

At the last meeting of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, several important alterations were made in the classification, time allowance and course in the yachts competing in the fourteenth annual and fourth union regatta of the Club, which is to take place a week from to-morrow. As amended, the regulations read:

PRIZES.

Schooners—One prize, called the Union Prize, to be sailed for on time allowance.

One prize, donated by the flag officers, to be awarded to the first yacht home without regard to time allowance.

Sloops, first-class, second-class, and open boats, two prizes each, class same as for schooners.

In addition to the above the Club offers for yachts enrolled upon its books and carrying its pennant, a series of prizes called Club prizes, to be sailed for on time allowance, making in all twelve prizes to be offered for competition at this regatta.

All yachts may carry fore and aft sails.

Time allowance—The allowance of time for yachts to contest upon, shall be understood upon the basis agreed upon by the Committee of the Club, which may be referred to at the office of the secretary, J. M. SAWYER, No. 114 Washington, New-York.

The allowance of time for second-class sloops and open yachts will be based on length only.

All members of yacht clubs who desire to enter their yachts for this regatta are requested to send the name of vessel and the club to which they may be attached, with the length on deck over all and length on water-line, to the Secretary of the Brooklyn Yacht Club at an early day.

Numbers for each yacht to be placed in the centre of main-sail, both sides, will be furnished by the secretary of the Club at any time after the 15th of June.

THE COURSE.

The course for schooners to be the usual Club course, 4½ s. to the South-west Spit, passing it to the westward and southward, thence to the Romer Shoal, to the northward and eastward, and thence home, passing to westward of beacon on Romer Shoal.

First and second class sloops, to the south-west Spit, rounding it to the westward and southward, thence to and around stake-boat at the outer bar buoy, rounding the same to southward and eastward, and home, passing to eastward of beacon on Romer Shoal.

Open boats to the Southwest Spit, rounding the same to the southward and westward, and returns over the same course to the home stake-boat, which will be in the neighborhood of Bay Ridge.

All yachts, upon return, to pass the stake-boat to the westward.

All yachts to pass to the eastward of West Bank buoys, Nos. 9, 11 and 13, both going and returning.

All yachts to keep to westward of Nos. Lafayette, both in going and returning.

All yachts to attempt to pass each other, two hundred feet apart, of Gull's Head, New-York Bay; to be in line before 10 A. M. on the morning of the race.

All yachts entered for this regatta must positively be anchored in line by 10 o'clock. Each yacht to carry at the peak the signal of the club to which may belong.

Sloops, 100 yards to the north of schooners, in line order.

Open boats, 100 yards to the northward of sloops.

The Regatta Committee, consisting of Messrs. G. L. Haight, H. A. Mott, J. M. Sawyer, W. Rodman Backus, A. M. Weeks, M. F. Sheehan, R. Ogden, and W. Wood, in J. Hinson and W. B. Nicols, are striving vigorously to make this the grandest regatta of the season, and from the large number of crack yachts that will compete, and extraordinary inducements in the matter of prizes, but little doubt remains of their entire success.

A Lunatic's Story.

Yesterday morning a man of respectable appearance, who subsequently gave his name as PATRICK LYNCH, his residence as No. 18 Canal-street, and his age as thirty years, walked into the Coroner's office at the City Hall and inquired for Coroner Young, to whom he said he had been sent by a gentleman in Bowery-street. Coroner Young asking the nature of his business, the stranger acquainted all present by protesting himself the husband in the sight of Heaven of Mrs. LAURA D. FAIR, now under sentence of death in Oakland, California, for a crime he had been commanded by God to save her life. Becoming themselves excited he went on to declare that if she was executed he was liable and ready to suffer with her, as he was equally guilty. But these rhapsodic ravings intelligibly mingled with his first and second statements, that he had left San Francisco, saw that hence he left, the authorities of the city offered to build him a house in which to facilitate his jaunts. It became evident the man was insane, he was given in charge of Sergt. Fouchier, Twenty-sixth Precinct, by whom he was sent before Justice Dowling, at the Tombs Police Court, and was committed for examination.

Sunday Affrays.

At an early hour yesterday morning CHARLES KELLER and TIMOTHY KENEY entered the saloon of FREDERICK SCHILLING, No. 71 Bleecker-street, and created a disturbance. The proprietor going to the sidewalk to call the Police, they followed and beat him severely, one of them blows fracturing his knee. They were both arrested, and being arraigned before Justice Koon, at the Tombs Police Court, were committed for trial in default of bail.

PATRICK MCCAULEY, of No. 63 Mulberry-street, had an altercation early yesterday morning near his residence with an unknown man, who struck him on the head with a brick, inflicting a fracture of the skull. The wounded man was taken to Park Hospital, and the Police are looking for the assailant, but with no Oliver Twist-ed feeling he escaped.

An affray occurred at a late hour on Saturday night on the corner of West and Vesey streets, in which JOHN MCGOLDRICK, of No. 181 Bowery, was cut to the grain by WILLIAM MILTON, of No. 2 Mulberry-street. McGoldrick was wounded, McGoldrick was taken to the Park Hospital, and MILTON being arraigned before Justice SCOTT, at the Tombs Police Court, was committed.

A Widow's Right of Dower in New-Hampshire.

The following is the resolution introduced in the New-Hampshire House of Representatives on the 16th inst., of which an imperfect abstract was given by the telegraph:

Resolved, That the Committee on Judiciary be instructed to inquire into the expediency of providing by law that any widow whose husband died seized of any land in this State, shall have her dower assigned to her according to the value of the whole estate, whether wild or cultivated lands, or answer to the husband's and deceased or otherwise, and that no distinction shall be made, and no exception should not be entitled as held and aquire under the common law, and that the Committee inquire into the expediency of providing by law for the exemption of personal property from attachment or execution.

MONDAY, June 19—A. M.

The general Trade of the past week was again active in Cotton and Cotton Goods at advancing prices. The receipts of Cotton, as the crop year draws to its close, are 24,000 to 26,000 bales per week. Last week 24,040, against 15,026 bales for the corresponding week last June. The Exports from the Southern ports direct were 18,669 bales, against 32,760 bales, and from New-York 8,[illegible] against 6,579 bales same week last year; the relative difference growing out of the circumstance that speculators on this side has carried prices considerably above the Liverpool quotations. The total amount of Cotton marketed abroad, out of the present crop, from all the ports of the United States, is 3,008,000 bales, against 2,629,000 bales in 1870. The gross receipts, to date, are 2,945,000 bales against 2,800,000 bales in 1870. The crop, when finally figured up, to include consumption in the Southern States and other corrections, to Aug. 31, the close of the Cotton year, will probably reach 4,400,000 bales against 3,202,000 last year. There is considerable speculation on the prospects of the growing crop. The reports to the Agricultural Bureau at Washington indicate a falling off in the average planted of 12 or 15 ⅌ cent, but while these reports are no doubt collected with great care, they are liable to serious blunders where the planting has been in excess of last season, but not so confessed by the planter. The latest reports as to crop weather are favorable, and as there is nothing so deceptive as "short crop" estimates—not even Wall-street calculations on the rise or fall of Stocks—we should hold it safe to assume that at least 4,000,000 bales will be gathered next Fall with ordinary "picking weather." The improved trade in Great Britain, with the prospect of larger wants on the Continent and the constantly-increasing consumption at home, will require such a crop of American Cotton at good prices.

The Import entries of Foreign Merchandise continue on a liberal scale, and the New-York market is now taking a larger amount than last Summer by at least 12½ ⅌ cent. The Treasury is receiving more Customs on the present reduced Tariff, averaging 40@41 ⅌ cent., than last season on the Tariff averaging 45@46 ⅌ cent. But owing to the heavy exports of Gold and Silver in July and August last, and through the Spring months of this year, our Foreign Trade balances have not been increased, and up to March 31, the close of the Third Quarter, the Fiscal returns show a moderate difference in favor of the United States since July 1, 1870.

The price of Gold has been controlled, since our last weekly review, by a speculation in the Gold Room based on the comparatively light Circulation of Gold Notes available for the uses of the Merchant and Banker. This time last year the Circulation amounted to $24,004,000. It is now only $18,240,000, representing less than 20 ⅌ cent. of the Gold Coin in the Treasury, $90,000,000. The success of the speculation, however, has not been very marked, and the price left off, on Saturday, 112¾ ⅌ cent. as against 112¼ ⅌ cent. at the close of the previous week. The Foreign Exchanges have partially recovered from the effect of the scarcity of Gold created by the movement referred to, and are now quoted 110¾ ⅌ cent. on London. The Stock Exchange has ruled dull through the week, notwithstanding cheap Money, and the prospect of its continuance for some months to come.

The weekly averages of the Associated Banks, Local and National, reporting through the Clearing-house for the week ending Saturday last, June 17, compare as follows with the previous week and also with the corresponding week last year. To which we add the Gold and Currency balances in the New-York Office of the United States Treasury, at these dates respectively:

The general line of deposits is up $1,381,814. In point of lawful Money strength the Statement is $1,716,405 better than last week, and the present excess over the required 25 ⅌ cent. to liabilities is $16,684,312. We add in the above table $500,000 to Local Capital, for the new Bank of the Metropolis. The Treasury Office received in Gold for Customs, during the week, $2,494,629, and paid out $333,096 for Gold Interest on the Public Debt. The Office also sold $2,000,000 Gold on Thursday. The Exports of Specie for the week include only a moderate sum, $412,418 of American Gold Coin. Money closed at 3 to 5 ⅌ cent. on call loan to the Brokers on a limited employment. The Foreign Exchanges were firm on London at 110¾@110¾ ⅌ cent. The Public Funds were ⅛@¼ ⅌ cent. higher than on Friday on a small offering of Bonds. The sales of Gold were again steady at 112¾ ⅌ cent.

The Import entries at New-York, embracing Foreign Dry Goods and General Merchandise, for the past week, were $8,423,330, as against $6,888,661 for the corresponding week last year. The Exports of Domestic Produce, other than Gold and Silver, were $3,998,129, against $3,897,468 same week in 1870. The Exports of Gold and Silver, $1,369,491, against $886,448 same week in 1870. The Customs in Gold paid into the New-York Office of the United States Treasury for the week were $2,494,630. The receipts of Cotton, coastwise and by rail, 19,449 bales.

The Stock speculation looked weak through the forenoon, and while there was some improvement on the Bank return, in the afternoon, the tempo of the market was by no means confident, and with the exception of a few special favorites like Rock Island there was no marked advance in prices. The prominent Brokers, as usual on Race Day, and on Saturday, left the Street early.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The Republican journals of Paris have put forth an electoral manifesto to counteract that of the Monarchists, in which they declare the Republic the only legitimate expression of the national sovereignty, while the monarchy is abdication of that sovereignty. The Duc D'AUMALE has taken up his residence at his chateau. The General Committee is said to have reorganized under the name of the Central Committee of the Federal National Guard. CLUSERET is reported to be alive and under arrest. Some arrests during the closing days of the insurrection have been released. Visitors are arriving in Paris by every train. The grand review of the French troops at Longchamps has been postponed, as the rains have softened the ground. The new Government loan will soon be issued. JULES FAVRE has defended his non-acceptance of peace on the occasion of his visit to the German head-quarters, on the ground that BISMARCK had demanded the cession of Strasbourg. Minister WASHBURNE is to spend some time at Carlsbad for the benefit of his health. M. JULES FERRY has been appointed Minister to Washington, to succeed M. TREILHAR. Prof. MONTAGU BERNARD is to enter the British Privy Council. A rumor that Mr. DISRAELI was to be deposed from the Opposition leadership is denied. A band, believed to be Fenians, broke into an armory in Mallow, Ireland, on Saturday night, and stole 130 rifles. Some of the arms were recovered next morning, and five men were arrested on suspicion....Mr. LORILLARD's yacht Enchantress is at Southampton. Eight of her crew have been arrested for mutiny, and one of them has been committed to prison on the charge of stabbing an officer.... Baron VON BEUST recently stated in an official speech that the Austrian Government had no designs against Germany; that representatives were kept at the South German Courts at the desire of Prussia, and in Rome with the consent of the Italian Government....The first levy for the Italian army in the Roman provinces is satisfactory. The King is going to Naples, and returning will visit Rome....The Turkish Government refuses to receive Mr. TRICOUPIS as Ambassador of Greece, for the reason that he was Foreign Minister during the Cretan insurrection. The Greek Government has forwarded an immediate recall to Mr. RANGABE, its Envoy to Washington.

GENERAL.

The news of the fight with the Coreans created great excitement in Hong-Kong among the foreign population. Advices from Washington were eagerly looked for, as Admiral ROGERS would continue operations unless forbidden. The instructions to Minister LOW, sent a year ago, authorized the negotiation of a treaty with the Corean authorities for the protection of shipwrecked mariners, and, if an opportunity was favorable, to include provisions for commercial advantages. He was also instructed to maintain firmly the right of the United States to protect their seamen. He was also to avoid a collision if it could be avoided without dishonor.

The Southern and Western Turf Congress opened on Saturday at Abbey Track, St. Louis, and will resume on Thursday, continuing through the week.

Mexican advices to the 11th inst., state that an extra session will be called. MARIAN. PAZZO declines to be Minister to Washington. An American journal has been established at the capital. Great agitation exists in view of the approaching Presidential election, and outrages and seen sanguinary are prominent. The City Council of the capital has been expelled by insurgents. Political news is of no importance. Gen. GARZO has been condemned to death for the murder of Gen. PATRON.

Secretary FRIST will leave Washington toward the last of this month, together with Mrs. FRIST, for New-York. He will be absent for some weeks.

Mr. Vallandigham's Representative Character.

The late Mr. VALLANDIGHAM was a representative of a very large if not the largest portion of the active leaders of the Democratic Party. He was nothing in public life of not a politician bent on success, and troubled with no sentimental scruples as to the means of its attainment, and it was precisely this fact, joined to his energy and talents, that made him the representative man he was. There is an old feeling of repugnance to saying anything of the dead unless it be good, and the feeling is of honorable origin. It expresses the kindness of men—not so much toward the dead as toward the survivors to whom the dead are dear—an unwillingness to jar by hard even if just criticism the sensibilities of those to whom the memory of the dead is the more precious from the freshness of sorrow. But since the remarkable death of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, following immediately on so bold a political step as the one just taken by him, must draw all eyes toward the history of his life which the Press is presenting, and since there have already been and must still more generally be very earnest attempts made to cloak the actual facts of his career with a sentimental covering, it cannot be unwise or really unkind to point out some of the plainest lessons of that career.

Mr. VALLANDIGHAM exhibited those qualities which have always been prominent in the prominent men of the Democracy—intellectual adroitness, indifference to the moral aspect of political questions, and restless, unlimited ambition. He was by nature a partisan, and while he never sank below that code of honor which partisans tacitly observe, he never rose above it. His mind was acute, his knowledge of certain sides of human nature intimate and to an unusual degree ready to his hand, and his appeals to the prejudices and immediate interests or selfishness of men were skillful and generally successful. But when he faced men with their moral natures deeply stirred, men with aroused patriotism casting aside the petty considerations of common life and lighting in the hearts of farmers and mechanics and shopmen, the spirit that made sacrifice not only possible but easy, Mr. VALLANDIGHAM was utterly powerless. He was unable to comprehend the change that the deep agitation of the war produced in his fellow-citizens, and probably no man was so confounded as he by the avalanche of one hundred thousand votes that buried him out of sight, when he appealed from what his friends called the martyr's stake to what he supposed was a sympathizing and indignant community. With all his sharpness, he had not been able to perceive the tremendous intensity of the national feeling before which all his clap-trap about "prisons of State," "political bastiles," "outraged personal rights," and "Magna Charta" shriveled and disappeared.

His political successes before the war, which within their range were certainly remarkable, and his utter collapse when he undertook to assail the national cause in the midst of the war, illustrate his characteristics of intellectual adroitness, and want of appreciation of the moral side of political questions. They illustrate also, with his recent "new departure," his unappeasable ambition. His course during the war has been cited to sustain his fidelity to principle, and the disinterestedness of his political devotion. The plea does not bear analysis. He knew that the strength of his party had always been in and of the South. He looked forward to the time when that party would again control the nation and the South would continue to control the party, and worked with reference to that time. He had no sympathy with the popular cause, did not apprehend its invincible lodgment in the national mind, and believed that his apparent sacrifices were paving the way to pre-eminent influence in those happy days of restored Democracy, which his every public utterance showed he confidently anticipated. When, since the war, even his slow and doubting heart was overcome by the completeness and constancy of the popular resolution to maintain the results of the war, and by the evident impossibility of ever again building political fortunes on the reactionary element North or South, he turned his back on his old professions not only with ease, but with noisy superfluity of enthusiasm. He did not expect immediate success. He knew that on the one hand the masses of the Democracy were too heavy in mind and too sluggish in party temperament to change their banners and their line of march in a few months, and on the other, that the people of the country were not to be immediately fooled by professions of zealous party from condemned and hitherto unrepentant offenders. But he expected in the long run to do better by turning, then by standing still or going on, and in the meantime he was sure of immediate individual notoriety and confident of future personal advancement.

Hard as this judgment seems of a man who has gone beyond the effect of human criticism, it must not be forgotten that in his life he was in close sympathy with, and was a faithful representative of, the party for whose triumph in the National Government he was earnestly enlisted, and whose leaders were everywhere trying to goad their followers to follow his footsteps. His individual fickleness at the bidding of ambition is but the type of his party's fickleness. His cool indifference to the obvious moral stultification he practiced marks the acts of the leading men and journals and conventions of his party. If he was a partisan politician and nothing else, he was the co-laborer and trusted counselor of that large body of partisan politicians who are now plotting to cheat the American people into the belief that they are most competent to preserve a Constitution they would once have allowed to be assailed with impunity, and to administer a Government which, if they had had their way, would no longer require administration.

Tammany's Invitation to Celebrate.

We have received an invitation from the "Tammany Society, or Columbian Order," to be present at the Wigwam at 10 o'clock on the morning of the Fourth of July, to help to celebrate Independence Day. The invitation is signed by a long list of "Sachems," beginning with OAKEY HALL and ending with "Boss" TWEED. Both in style and matter it is somewhat of a curiosity. There is no mistaking its authorship; the versatile and scholarly genius of our literary Mayor shines forth in every line. Take the following, for example, with which, after a preliminary paragraph about the origin of the Tammany Society, the invitation opens:

"As of the command of its charter; as its usage; as is the delight of its brothers, the Tammany Society again prepares to celebrate the Fourth of July. It has now the honor to invite you to participate in its ceremonies upon this anniversary of National Independence Day in 1871, and to request from you, if you cannot meet with us, some written expressions of your patriotic sentiments and counsel."

The frequent use of the word "as" all through the invitation is one of its most striking literary peculiarities. So persistent is its repetition that the reader begins to wonder whether Mayor HALL may not shortly develop a liking similar to that of Constable Dogberry for his favorite particle, with an "s" added.

Thus we are told:

"The Tammany Society has continuously and conscientiously celebrated all commemorative national anniversaries, as adding to keeping alive the patriotic flame."

And again:

"As our Revolutionary fathers first met on a Fourth of July to protest against the grievous burdens of taxation, as well as military interference."

And thus:

"As in 1776, the voice of a Massachusetts ADAMS was heard," &c.

And finally:

"The Tammany Society hopes to bear, as heretofore, its fullest share in the heat and burden of the battle. Its motto is, as always, 'Measures, not men.'"

As it will not be in our power to accept the pressing invitation of the Sachems to be present at the Wigwam, we hasten to comply with the request to furnish "some written expressions of our patriotic sentiments and counsel." And first we are called upon to answer the following grave question:

"Has it not become the exclusive mission of the Democratic Party to preserve veneration for the spirit of the Constitution and for the memory of its founders?"

We are reluctantly compelled to respond in the negative, and for the following reasons: In the first place, not one Democrat in a hundred, in the State of New-York at least, ever read the Constitution, and therefore it would be too much to expect the bulk of the party to know anything about its "spirit." In the second place, not one in a thousand can tell the name of any of the founders of the Constitution, and therefore an exceedingly small proportion of the party can be expected to venerate their memory. The Sachems tell us further that "the Administration party disregard the sanctity of constitutional obligations, and have no respect for Revolutionary history. Its celebration of patriotic anniversaries, on which were founded constitutional doctrines, would be an obvious satire." The outrage on unity of grammatical construction is equalled here by the violence done to historical fact. The Administration party is assuredly the party that saved the Constitution from being destroyed by traitors, who were aided by Northern Democrats. It consequently showed the highest "respect for Revolutionary history" by preserving the Government established by the Revolution, and maintaining the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence. Whether the "celebration" spoken of in the last sentence above quoted would be "obvious satire" or not, the sentence itself is obvious nonsense.

As a specimen of unadulterated twaddle, the following needs no comment:

"The Radical leaders know that it is only by undermining patriotic sentiments and respect for constitutional obligations that their party can prepare its rash, heedless and inconsistent followers to accept Executive despotism and Congressional centralization and military domination as the pills."

Passing over the rigmarole about "our Revolutionary fathers," and the "voice of the Massachusetts Adamses," we come to the following comforting prophecy:

"Before another Fourth of July shall arrive the Democratic Party will have commenced that practical political struggle for a Presidential campaign which must result in a complete victory for popular rights, for free government, and for national economy and prosperity."

The "practical political struggle," here spoken of, will not be, we apprehend, "for a Presidential campaign," but for a President; for we cordially agree with the Sachems that it will "result" precisely as they say. At any rate the Republicans will do their best to bring about such a result, and, in so doing, will keep a close watch on the Democratic Party and especially that branch of it which owns allegiance to Tammany Hall.

And now, since we are asked to give our "counsel" to the Sachems, we will say to them that if their proposed celebration of the Fourth of July were to partake a little more of the patriotic, and less of the partisan character, it would better coincide with the practice of the founders of the Tammany Society, and be more consistent with their duties as American citizens. Their annual Fourth of July pow-wow, in which they try to gain a little political capital by "playing Injin," and babbling about the "big chief," the "great spring," "tobacco," "fire-water," "war-dances," &c., cannot conceal from the public the fact that the "Tammany Society" of the present day is a secret conclave of political adventurers, having no sympathies in common with genuine Democracy, and whose only object is self-aggrandizement and plunder, at the expense of the ignorant masses whom they humbug into supporting them.

The Indian Council.

The "new departure" of the red men is, when considered as a chapter in human progress, perhaps a more momentous event than the great political juggle which the Democratic pale-faces have been seeking to accomplish under that title. MAZZINI the other day ridiculed the idea of the French Communists going back to the Middle Ages for a political idea, and asked why they should have stopped short of the patriarchal unit of government—the family or the tribe. In the Indian effort to form a self-governing community, we have an illustration of exactly the reverse of the latter alternative. The patriarchal organization which our race left behind them on the steppes of Asia finds its duplicate on the Western plains. The most advanced of the political systems of the world finds itself face to face with the most primitive whence it has been evolved, and the tribe is suddenly compelled to adapt itself to the township, the electoral district, and all the institutions which these bring with them, or submit to the terrible certainty of decay and ultimate extinction. The "five nations" of the Indian Territory number less than sixty thousand, but they present a conclusive proof that the red man can be civilized, and they are the only medium through which we can hope to reclaim the wild tribes of the plains. Their country comprises "one of the richest and most fertile regions in the United States," is 332 miles long, 208 miles wide, and contains 70,456 square miles. It has been described as containing fifty millions of acres of land, and as being equal to seventy States of the size of Rhode Island, and about one and a half of the size of New-York. For every man, woman and child in the Indian Territory there is thus, at present, an area of not much less than one thousand acres, so that the Territory can undoubtedly sustain with very great ease the six millions claimed for it by Gen. SHERMAN, and is as large a field as could possibly be desired on which to work out a great political and social experiment.

The Territorial Constitution on which the General Council at Okmulgee is at present deliberating is in many points merely an expansion of the existing political usages of the "Five Nations." Among the Cherokees, for example, there exist already an upper and lower Legislative Chamber returned by nine districts, and elected after a fashion essentially representative. The new Constitution aims at effecting a fusion which shall be first political and then social. Its probable results were thus described by Gen. SHERMAN: There will be no longer Creeks, Choctaws or Cherokees; all the titles of the tribes will be merged in one people, and all executive, legislative and judicial functions will be consolidated in one centre. It is precisely at this point that the true Indian problem is touched, and from it the difficulties in the way of the acceptance of the Territorial Constitution will be found to arise. We have long since discovered that a radical error was committed in dealing with the Indian tribes, as with independent nations. We are more slowly becoming awake to the fact that in doing our best to strengthen the tribal organization of the Indians we have made no less decided a blunder. If the Indian is to survive on this continent at all, it must be by elevating himself to the social, industrial, and political level of the white man. With time and opportunity, it is pretty obvious that he can do this. It is equally certain that the maintenance of the authority of the Chiefs and their belongings forms one of the most potent obstacles to Indian progress. Among the semi-civilized tribes, this is specially obvious. We intrust to the Chiefs for distribution, a large proportion of our bounty, or of the returns of funds held in trust by the Government. The nominal head of the tribe thus becomes vitally interested in resisting that certain decay of his authority and importance which results from the adoption of civilized usages. Nothing brings out the independence of the individual so strongly as our republican freedom, while nothing is more inconsistent with its legitimate exercise than the perpetuation of a kind of dignity which has no significance apart from barbarism or warfare.

To the provisions of the Constitution which was drafted in December last for the new Territory of Oklahoma we have previously adverted. They do not differ in any marked degree from the type which prevails in the other States. It was expected that before the present meeting of the General Council the new Constitution would have been formally accepted by the various tribes in the Territory. The Indian seems, however, to be as jealous of his distinctive tribal organization as any old German Duchy was of its mimic Court and its solemn farce of State administration. It is easier to control the outward semblance of deliberative and representative bodies than to grasp the new idea of a unified nation on which they rest. It is sagacious to bear in mind that the Indian tribes have historical memories whose force we are very apt to underrate. For example the Cherokees, no later than ten years ago were said to have numbered 25,000, while at this moment they do not contain more than 18,000 souls. Ascending by ever widening gradations like this, through the decades of a couple of centuries, we begin to find ourselves in the presence of a veritable nation whose seven great clans are still represented on the seven-pointed star of their State seal, and whose original wealth is but faintly reproduced in the four millions of acres of land which they hold in fee simple, and the four millions of dollars of trust funds on which the Government pays them an annual interest. A competent authority states that previous to the war the Cherokees "owned immense herds of cattle, one individual alone owning 10,000 head. Others owned 15,000, 10,000 and so down to 200, and the man who owned less was considered a poor Indian." Of other tribes similar statements might be made, and they are of immense importance in helping us to estimate the difficulties which arrest the completion of Indian union as well as the greatness of the wrongs whose memory still begets distrust of our intentions toward the red men.

The Houston Secession.

The fatality that leads some men to be the destroyers of their own fortune has seldom been more conspicuously exemplified than by the recent manifesto of the Count DE CHAMBORD. It is undeniable that, whatever may have been the hopes of the Legitimists before the appearance of that ill-judged document, they are now materially weakened and discouraged. The Count's obscure pledges regarding constitutional government, his open declaration in favor of Romanism, and his proposal to intervene in behalf of the Pope, imply an hallucination on the part of their enunciator which seems almost next door to insanity. Of course, if the Count DE CHAMBORD feels that the occasion is one which calls simply for an expression of individual convictions, quite apart from the chances or hopes of HENRY V., his position is intelligible. But considered as a bid for the throne of France, or as establishing a preferential choice over the Bonapartists, the Orleanists, or even the Commune, the manifesto is wonderfully ill-conceived and most injudiciously expressed.

It has been pointed out as a bar to his pretensions that forty years of the Count DE CHAMBORD's half century have been passed out of France, and that, consequently, he must be insufficiently acquainted with the country he aspires to govern. The argument is perhaps more specious than sound, but it certainly is fortified by the candidate's late pronunciamiento in a way that his foes must find extremely gratifying. It is seldom that the old and stale adage about the BOURBONS receives so fresh and vigorous a justification. The Legitimists are intensely disappointed, and heart of grace has clearly been taken by the various opposing factions, who are equally pleased to get rid of a rival. Meanwhile, the usual effect of a Bourbon manifesto has been produced with amazing promptitude. A gentleman who signs himself AUGUSTE DE BOURBON has begun to issue proclamations—chiefly confined, so far, to the London newspapers—announcing that he, and not the Count DE CHAMBORD, is the true representative of the BOURBONS. This claim is founded substantially on the familiar story of which Rev. ELIAKIM WILLIAMS and half a score of others have figured as the hero. The son of LOUIS XVI. and MARIE ANTOINETTE, according to this version, duly made their escape from the Tower of the Temple; LOUIS XVII. passed his life in England under the pseudonym of "Meves," the incognito was preserved with the utmost strictness through fear of assassination or other evils; and, finally, AUGUSTE DE BOURBON is, if we understand him, the son of the monarch thus exiled in infancy. The curious book published by RIDGWAY, of Piccadilly, and called Historical Memoirs of Louis XVII., is, we are further assured, strictly trustworthy and may be perused in confirmation of the claims of AUGUSTE to be, to use his own words, "directly acknowledged the direct head of the elder branch of the House of BOURBON."

It must be confessed that there are some things in the letters of this claimant that in a measure attest his pretensions. Whether he is "the direct head of the elder branch" or not, he assuredly writes very much in the traditional tone and spirit of the race whose name he bears. The condescending approval he bestows on the manifesto of the Count DE CHAMBORD, more particularly at the points most obviously opposed to good sense or the most ordinary rules of political sagacity, is strong confirmatory evidence of his strain, and could his conflicting demands be forgotten, might well induce the Count DE CHAMBORD to extend to AUGUSTE DE BOURBON fraternal arms. It will be a repetition of former experience if other dauphins and sons of dauphins should now make their appearance, and that we should be deafened with the arguments of their respective adherents. The manifesto of the Count DE CHAMBORD goes far, perhaps, to render all such controversy superfluous; but history shows that contestants for so slight a prize as a throne seldom relax the energy of their expostulations for so slight a reason as that there is not a ghost of a chance in facts or logic that the object of their desire will be attained.

MINOR TOPICS.

Advices recently received from St. Petersburg state that the Imperial Embassy at Washington will shortly be elevated to a mission of the first class. Russia has now five Embassies of the first order, represented in the persons of the Ambassadors to London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Constantinople. The Czar of Russia, the dispatch says, contemplates making this promotion in the Corps Diplomatique not only as an acknowledgment of the importance which His Majesty attaches to the mutual spirit of friendly relations which have so long existed between the United States and the Imperial Government at St. Petersburg. This change will give M. CATACAZY, the present courteous representative of the Russian Government at Washington, the rank of Ambassador, the highest grade in the Diplomatic Corps.

There is something extremely unpleasant about the temper of the parties to the trial now going on before the Methodist Book Committee. It is not soothing to see the set of estimable clergymen and lay brethren of unquestionable piety beseeching the Committee to let them have sight of certain account books, unhampered by the presence of the chief book-keeper, himself a minister in good standing, on the ground that the book-keeper would make unworthy use of what he heard, and to hear another set of equally estimable clergymen and lay brethren demanding that the books be withheld for fear they should be mutilated or manipulated. Certainly, if these fears are mutually entertained they had better be expressed frankly, but they serve to convince merely secular critics that the administration of a huge business is not the proper employment of any religious denomination.

Col. FISK is determined to make Boston believe in spite of itself that it was that to see him and his regiment. In the most genial manner possible he assures the citizens of the "Hub" that they have not seen the last of him yet. He anticipated and hoped for an early opportunity to repeat the visit. We shall shortly have good Bostonians impatiently asking what they have done that not only should the place of their souls' repose be desecrated by Cosmopolitic Vandals, but the place of their abode while in the flesh should be made untenable by the periodic reappearance of Falstaff FISK and his festivity-loving warriors.

M. FAVRE has assumed, before the National Assembly, the role of explanatory apologist for its own acts, lately dragged by Gen. TROCHU. He very conveniently suggests that the Assembly extend its inquiry to the Insurrectionists. But there is as grave a responsibility resting on the Government of M. FAVRE and GAMBETTA as on that of the Empire. If NAPOLEON made war when he should have continued at peace, FAVRE and GAMBETTA continued war when peace was possible. And it must be remembered of the Empire that it was almost unanimously sustained by a recently elected representative body, while FAVRE and GAMBETTA persistently refused to call a representative body, for the avowed reason that they might not be sustained by it. It is of this kind of revolutionism that author Proudhon complains in the words of a recent writer, "We do not like coups d'état any more than revolutions; we do not like revolutions, precisely because they lead to coups d'état."

In the course of the discussion of the question of the Viaduct Railway terminus on Saturday, at the Chamber of Commerce, some very sensible remarks were made by the Chairman of the meeting, Mr. A. A. LOW. Referring to the confidence in the commercial supremacy of New-York, based on the enormous value of real estate in this City, Mr. LOW said that the fact warranted an exactly opposite conclusion, since it indicated too heavy a tax upon business for the expense of conducting it. Of course, the effect of such a tax is relative and cannot be arbitrarily calculated. But that there is a point beyond which business will not bear expense is plain, just as plain as that our Municipal Government is utterly indifferent as to how soon that point is reached.

Father HYACINTHE attributes the excesses of the Commune to "skepticism at Paris, fanaticism at Rome," and believes that both have been produced by withdrawing politics and religion from intimate popular interest. The Government has treated the people to "food and diversion" but left them ignorant, while it has enforced celibacy on the vast standing army, thus sapping the foundations of private and public intelligence and virtue. At the same time the Church has been distracted by the claims of the Pope, and has paid more attention to the "bitter controversies about the Pope-King, the dogmatization of intolerance, and the canonization of the Inquisition," than to the cure of souls. The eloquence of a Catholic pleading for general secular instruction, and against the political meddling of the Papal party, is refreshing to those familiar with the dreary and narrow dogmatism that prevails throughout most of the expressions of the Catholic Church and pulpit.

AMUSEMENTS.

Notes and Announcements.

THE THEATRES.

The single change of bill to be made this evening, will consist of a substitution of "The Child Stealer" for "East Lynne" at the Olympic. The undiminished popularity of "Rosedale" at Wallack's has caused the postponement of the production of "The Long Strike" until Wednesday. The new piece at the Fifth-avenue is not down for public rehearsal to-morrow. At Niblo's, "Paul Clifford;" at Booth's, "The Man o'Airlie," and at Wood's, the pantomime of "Three Blind Mice," will continue their respective runs.

THE SUMMER GARDENS.

The Central Park Garden and Tarrace Garden are both prospering. The success of the two places is well deserved, and, as we have already said, will be fraught with good results for the cause of music in this country. Mr. THOMAS has an admirable orchestra under his control, and every piece of an inexhaustible repertory is recited by his forces with an intelligence, spirit and precision not to be excelled in any part of the world. M. JULLIEN also has a strong and clever force of musicians, and the introduction of soloists as contributors to the entertainments—on Friday, Miss HERZOG and Herr HABELMANN sang, and instrumental performances were supplied by Herr HEINE, an exceedingly accomplished violinist, and Mme. HEINE, pianist—is a feature of his concerts. The single unpleasant incident noticeable at these very reasonable affairs grows out of the occasional unwillingness of a small fraction of the audience to observe the silence a proper appreciation of the music demands. We are sorry to record our experience as implicating ladies rather than their escorts. A very discreditable display of disregard for performers and audience was offered but a few nights ago at the Central Park Garden, and less noticeable breaches of decorum and exhibitions of ignorance constantly occur. The music rendered, its style of execution, and the character of the assemblages ought not to be thus set at nought.

PARIS IN NEW-YORK.

A most accurate and handsome representation of the City of Paris is now offered, with the accompaniment of a brief lecture, at the San Francisco Minstrel Hall, day and night. The French metropolis is reproduced by means of a miniature city of houses and monuments extending over a surface of 400 square feet. All the streets are to be traced, all the squares to be looked down upon, and all the architectural masses to be admired; and if the exhibitor of the place were assisted more by a Lilliputian visitor, he might dispatch him through thoroughfares over bridges and within and WITHIN! Reflections with an instructive a result as would follow the exploration of the capital itself, and with the last thing bewildering for the MIND. Several thousand solid structures make up the Paris now within reach, and the sight is one not only of a far more entertaining kind than that of a mistress or ordinary plan, but quite pretty. We commend its advantages especially to those persons who have become contented by a frequent inspection of newspaper maps.

PERSONAL GOSSIP.

Among the passengers for Europe, Saturday, were Mr. HAMILTON VILANOVA, the distinguished pianist, and Mr. and Mrs. CARAMANI, Mme. MADDI, and Mr. and Mrs. DEMERITE, of the New-Orleans Opera Troupe.

THE NEW-ORLEANS FLOOD.

Actual Extent of the Overflow—A Very Small Portion of the City Inundated.

From the New-Orleans Picayune, June 14.

In order the better to counvert the false impression which exists in the minds of the people of the North and West in regard to the condition of New-Orleans, we have obtained from the City Surveyor a statement of the area of the city, and the actual area overflowed by the waters from the canal.

The whole area drained, according to Mr. HERSEY, is 15,877 acres, while the area overflowed was but 1,647. Thus it will be seen that we are not nearly so much affected by the water as would be inferred from the statements which have been freely circulated to the great detriment of New-Orleans. There are still, at every point within the flood, water at the height, in some places of dry land in the city upon which we could move about, and it will be borne in mind, too, that a large proportion of the 1,647 acres mentioned comes from improvement or best squatted. We are merely certainly secure from overflow by the water of the Mississippi, but can never again suffer from then we have from inundation by means of overflows from the lake. Indeed, we trust and believe that before another year shall have elapsed, the lake front will be completed, levee will be constructed, and we shall be in a position to defy a water of impossibility. The authorities of the Council seem fully awake to the necessity of having that levee built, and Governor HEAD has been called upon to furnish immediately an estimate of what the actual cost of the construction will be.

The water is rapidly receding, the drawn of many of the recently submerged streets being now visible, and all the pumps, together with the Osage and draining machine are constantly at work. The Administrator of Improvements is making fences, bridges and crossings to be repaired as fast as the water recedes, and it is now about two feet from a high believed high water mark. Hagan avenue, which was the new visible from the new canal to Carrollton-street, though Monday evening it was under water. The Relief Committee, Messrs. BONHAMO, LEWIS and DELAHAYE, are still at the Mansion House, receiving the returns made them by the city authorities and by prominent citizens. The rain, which has been of daily occurrence, though disastrous to the crops, will be beneficial in cleansing the filth and mud to be swept out from the portions of the city relieved of the flood. Nothing may prevent any unfavorable or unfortunate effects being experienced by reason of the flood.

The Central Railroad Case—Answer of Chauncey Cooper to the Tribune.

Hon. Horace Greeley:

DEAR SIR: On returning from West Point, I found in the Tribune of yesterday an editorial article in which a version filed was dressed into an allusion to a few remarks made by me last Monday to the Cadets at West Point. The article begins by saying:

"We observe that there has been some feeling at West Point over the visit of Senator CHAUNCEY, of the Central Pacific Railroad Company. The young gentlemen, it appears, have reason to be very grateful. A Senator who has been so long engaged in a contest with a great corporation, and who, moreover, is a member of the Committee on Pacific Railroads, must be a most welcome visitor on such a spot, and less gaily man."

It then says:

"On the 20 of March we did something the honor to call the Senator's attention to his affairs in these terms:

"Since a person is in the Senate of the United States, in a committee for the New-York Central in the regulation of the Commerce of Internal Revenue on the question of paying money out of the Treasury immediately with the law of the land and the "higher law" as with A Senator who is a member of Congress should never appear as the guest, even of any gentleman, without asking the Commander's leave."

After the extract of an old and obsolete dated calendar, it quotes a paragraph from the Chicago Tribune, which, under its pen, is made to represent, in bitterness, hostile as ever, and editor has before this attached your name and venomously that you ought to adopt its spirit and style of warfare. This paragraph which has appeared before, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in the manner referred to are these: I was entitled to be know if I would be robbed, provided the Company would authorize it; but I declined. About ten days afterward, the young lawyer, who had charge of the case, and who had first applied to me to know if if I would be robbed, and who was formerly a lawyer in Milwaukee, and my friend, came to my room, and told me that he feared he should be driven into the hearing the next morning, in the absence of the Company's counsel, and that he had got full consent to be fleeced the proper construction of the statutes applicable to the case; and appealed to me to go before the Commissioner and state my views upon the statutes, as a personal favor to him, if I would not be mistaken as consent for the Company. This I consented to do; and next morning went as I had a perfect right to, and would do again to-morrow. I stated my opinion of the effect of the statutes as fairly as I would have summed them up to a jury if I had been on the bench; and then left without any participation in the subsequent trial or hearing. It was not occupied over half an hour. And what I did was done merely as a personal favor to the young lawyer who appealed to me. I not only received no compensation, but it was distinctly understood before I went, that I would not receive any remuneration whatever.

"I never was retained by this Railroad Company, nor on its behalf, in any matter whatever; and I never received a cent from it, nor from any one on its behalf, upon any occasion whatever. I never had even a pass over its road, nor rode a mile upon the road without paying the ordinary fare.

After seeing the second republication of this libel in your paper, I addressed a note to the President of the Company and received from him last evening his reply, as follows:

THE NEW-YORK CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY,
(President's Office) NEW-YORK, June 18, 1871.

Hon. Wm. M. Carpenter:

MY DEAR SIR: I have your letter of this morning, and hasten to say that your statement is precisely true. You were never in the Company's employ or in its behalf, or by its authority, in the matter of the hearing before the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or any other matter whatever, since 1867, when I became President of the Company.

"I was not aware that you were expected to appear, or that you had been by any person requested to appear as counsel in the matter, until after the hearing had taken place. I know that you have never received from the Company for that, or any other service whatever, and that no authority for your employment was ever given by this Company.

A very much respected friend has subjected you to and unfairness to a friend should have subjected you to a charge of sensational impropriety, which I know to be wholly unfounded. C. VANDERBILT, President.

Although the libel referred to has been treated with contempt in the North-west, where the editor of the Chicago Tribune and myself are both known, the New-York Tribune, which goes to the whole country with the indorsement and under the sanction and authority of your name and reputation, now repeats the libel, and adds the charge that I have committed a misdemeanor. This charge will be understood to have been made by you, though I know it was not. I therefore appeal to your sense of justice to publish this card, as prominently as the accusation was published. MATT. H. CARPENTER.

STARTLING HORRORS.

Murder and Suicide in West Eleventh-Street.

A Father Destroys His Two Children and Then Himself.

A German Fatally Stabbed in Allen-Street.

Several Other Felonious Assaults in This City Last Night.

One of the most shocking and ghastly of recent tragedies was discovered at 9 o'clock last evening by Capt. WASHBURNE, of the Ninth Police Precinct, in the House No. 143 West Eleventh-street, west of Sixth-avenue. The neighborhood is a most respectable one, and the house itself a three-story brick, high stoop, with basement, in the usual style of dwellings of the better class. It has been occupied by Dr. JAMES J. CONNOLLY, with his wife and two children, MARY AGNES, aged two years and seven months, and CLARA REGINA, aged seven months. For some reason the house was in great disorder, as none of the carpets were down, and what furniture was in it was scattered about in confusion.

The family does not appear to have attracted any special attention from the neighbors until yesterday afternoon. The voice of the lady was heard about 5 o'clock, shrieking for her baby, and her words were distinguished beseeching her husband to bring the child down-stairs. This was continued so long, and became so vehement, that one of the neighbors hastened to the Ninth Precinct Station-house and reported the matter to Capt. WASHBURNE, who at once sent Officers BRADLEY and HOGAN to the house. Upon ringing the bell they were confronted by Mrs. CONNOLLY, who, in answer to their questions, declared there was nothing wrong in the house, and demanded that they should retire. They heard, however, that the police had been there, and on reporting that fact at the Station-house, Capt. WASHBURNE at once hastened in person to the house.

Upon his arrival, he too was met by Mrs. CONNOLLY, who repeated to him the same declarations she had made to the officers. But she added that she would send for Judge QUINN, who had stood up with them when they were married, and she thought her husband would answer him. This remark convinced Capt. WASHBURNE that Dr. CONNOLLY was locked in some room in the house with the two children, and that vain efforts had been made to communicate with him. He therefore determined to waste no further time in dallying with the matter, but despite the protests of Mrs. CONNOLLY forcibly his way into the house. Reaching the second floor he found the door of the back room locked. The distracted lady assured him that her husband was on the third floor, but determined to investigate as he went, he ordered his officers to break in the door. This was done and only the blackness of night was met. Groping his way into the chamber Capt. WASHBURNE struck a light, and the terror of the house was visible.

Upon the bed, which was in the centre of the room, lay the father and children, covered with blood and quite dead. A more horrible sight all the horror and crime of the Metropolis never betray-presented. The father lay upon the edge of the bed, his throat cut, the carotid artery severed, and smeared with blood over the face and upper part of the body. The children lay upon his left and about five feet beyond him. Like him they were upon their backs, like him had the carotid arteries severed, and like him smeared with blood, but they presented a much more heart-rending sight. The babe lay below the elder child with its head close against the body of the former, whose legs were spread apart and stretched out on each side of the infant. Both the children were in night dress, and the man was undressed to his shirt and drawers, the first being white muslin, and the latter red flannel. The man's face was slightly turned backward, the lower portion covered with a long, thin black beard that hid the mouth, but the eyes were partly open, and had a stare that would seem to still have in it a remnant of consciousness. The children's eyes were wholly open, and while there, caused in those of the elder and in her half-open mouth an expression of terror, three of the babe seemed to show only an innocent wonder that was most touching. Beyond the children and upon the bed lay a razor, the blade of which had been their lives and has a long, narrow-bladed breadth, sharpened to a keen point.

All this Capt. WASHBURNE took in at a glance, and saw also that all the bodies were rigid and cold, showing that death had occurred some time before. Having posted a guard at the door to keep out the curious crowd of curious people attracted by the news of the tragedy, his first care was to place Mrs. CONNOLLY, who was entirely overcome by the dreadful revelation of the room, in charge of the priest, who was yet in the house. He next endeavored to learn the cause of the tragedy, and although it was impossible to elicit any intelligent answer from the widow in her then condition, he soon learned from the neighbors that intemperance had ended in suicide and murder. Dr. CONNOLLY, who was about thirty-eight years of age, had been a man of fine attainments and excellent promise, but falling into dissipated habits had lost his practice and position in society. Finally he was so wrecked by liquor that he was placed in the Inebriate Asylum, from which he was discharged only three months ago. He was not cured of his fatal passion, and during the night or morning, and so far as could be ascertained, last night, destroyed his children and took his own life, while insane from the effects of liquor. An inquest will be held in the case this morning, when all the details of the causes leading to this terrible effect will probably be divulged.

It appeared from the later investigation of Capt. WASHBURNE that about 4 o'clock Mrs. CONNOLLY found that her husband had locked himself in the room with the children, and it was her cries upon discovering and in announcing this fact that first gave the alarm outside the house. Upon this fact a theory is raised, that up to a short time before the hour she had been in the room, and going out for some purpose the door was locked and the deed committed. Her reluctance to admit the officers is explained by her fear that her husband would be taken away and locked up, and there is every reason to believe that she had not the slightest suspicion of what had occurred. Her evident subsequent to the discovery was ample proof of her intense devotion, not only to her doomed children, but to her erring husband.

STILL ANOTHER MURDER.

A German Fatally Stabbed in Allen-Street—Arrest of the Assailant—His Story.

Another tragedy occurred last night, at a late hour, in the store of PHILIP SCHAEFFER, a painter, at No. 41 Allen-street, which will result in the death of ANTON SAILER. Both men are Germans. Both live in the house in which both have a store, SCHAEFFER being a painter, and SAILER a milkman. The former is a widower, forty-nine years of age, and has had frequent quarrels with SAILER, on account of his charge that the latter induced every housekeeper he got to leave him, by telling various slanderous stories about him. Last night the two men met in the store of SCHAEFFER, no one else being present. According to the version of the affair given by SCHAEFFER himself, in the Tenth Precinct Station-house, after his arrest, the old quarrel was renewed, and SAILER, putting up his hand, as if to strike, but not striking, or even attempting to do so, SCHAEFFER attacked him with a large dirk, inflicting four stab wounds in the abdomen. According to his own story, he then sought an officer to surrender himself, but Officer HANNON, of the Tenth Precinct, met and treated him as he was in the act of leaving the store, passed that we who endeavoring to escape into the crowd which had gathered in the street.

The murderer was taken to the Eldridge-street Police Station-house and searched, but with the exception of $140 in bills, nothing was found upon him. The store where the crime was committed was thoroughly searched by order of Sergts. ALLEN and MURPHY, but although the sheath of the knife was found upon the floor, the knife itself, up to a late hour this morning, had not been discovered. In addition to taking charge of the assailant the Police sought to complete the case against him by obtaining the antemortem statement of the wounded man, who was taken up to the floor in the house where he resided with his wife and three children. It was evident that he was in a dying condition, and Coroner HERMAN was telegraphed for, but as it was uncertain that SAILER would be alive when that official arrived, Sergt. ALLEN sent SCHAEFFER in charge of an officer to the bedside of his victim. SAILER was still conscious, and in reply to the question, made a declaration that he had received his wounds at the hands of SCHAEFFER. He was then able to speak only in a whisper, and it was evident that he could live only a few hours, if so long. The affair created considerable excitement among the German population, for late as was the hour at which it occurred, the news of the occurrence spread rapidly through the neighborhood.

Stabbing Affray.

Last evening a quarrel occurred at No. 195 Forsyth-street, between CHAS. BOHNER and AUGUST BOHNER, brothers, which resulted in the former attacking the other with a sword, inflicting a severe scalp-wound. The assailant was arrested and locked up in the Tenth Precinct Station-house.

MATHEW CAH, of No. 414 East Twenty-third-street, was stabbed in the thigh last evening, during an affray near his residence, by JOHN LANDERS, of No. 422 East Twenty-third-street. The wound is not serious.

An Officer Attacked by Rowdies.

A number of drunken ruffians becoming disorderly last night in Jackson-square, Officer KEARNEY, of the Ninth Precinct, arrested one of them named MICHAEL CONKLIN, when he was assaulted by the entire crowd with bricks and other missiles. The officer was struck on the head and received a severe scalp wound, but he bore off his prisoner from his friends and locked him up in the Charles-street Police Station.

EXTENSIVE BURGLARY.

A Short Stroke in Broome-Street Robbery—Capture of One of the Burglars and Recovery of all the Stolen Property.

A most clever and successful capture of burglars and recovery of stolen goods was made at a late hour Saturday night in the Eighth Precinct. Sergt. CHEVRIER, who was on patrol, noticed two men enter the lager-beer saloon at the corner of Mercer and Houston-street, carrying a black valise and a paper parcel. There was nothing in this circumstance suspicious in itself, but something in the furtive manner of the two men convinced the Sergeant that it would be well to pay further attention to them. He therefore called Officers BROWNING and STEWART to his assistance, and just as they reached him a wagon was driven up to the door of the saloon and being stopped, the two men came out and throwing in the valise and parcel, jumped in themselves and told the driver to drive away. CHEVRIER called upon them to halt, upon which they jumped from the wagon, and as is usual with thieves, ran in different directions, but both were pursued and one was overtaken and captured at the corner of Spring and Crosby streets, after a long and exciting chase. Meantime the horse and wagon had been taken by one of the officers to the Eighth Precinct Station-house, whither the prisoner was immediately conducted. The valise was found to contain ten shawls, with a lot of burglar's tools, and in the parcel sixteen lace shawls were found, so that it was evident there had been a robbery of about $1,000.

The prisoner gave his name as WILLIAM HARCOURT, and upon being questioned by Capt. MCDONNELL, admitted that in company with a confederate he had committed a burglary on the house No. 30 Duane-street, and that they had taken a large quantity of goods from the premises of JOHN SULLIVAN, importer of shawls, on the third floor of the building. All the goods, he said, had been stashed in bags, a part being removed to the roof and thence over adjoining houses to No. 48 Duane-street, through which they had descended to the first floor, and it being his subsequent home, they had left the goods in the hallway to await a favorable opportunity for their removal. Immediately upon receiving this information, Capt. MCDONNELL, with Sergt. CHEVRIER, who had started this extraordinary game, and several officers, went to the designated locality and took the prisoner with him. Upon examining the premises, the story of the latter was fully verified. In the hallway, lying just inside the door, were found 4 bags containing 183 lace and broche shawls, 23 poplin dress patterns and 3 pieces of cloth, valued altogether, at $1,200. Capt. MCDONNELL then went up in the rear of No. 48 Duane-street, and over the intervening buildings to No. 56, from which the goods had been taken, according to the tale of HARCOURT. The premises of Mr. SULLIVAN were found in a condition of almost inextricable confusion, showing that they had been thoroughly ransacked, and there was also found another bag containing a number of shawls valued at $600, which the frustrated thieves had neglected to remove. Capt. MCDONNELL gave the building a rigid examination, and found that although the door opening into the premises of WATSON & STEWART, shirt-bosom manufacturers, who occupy the fourth and fifth floors, had been forced, yet nothing had been taken, nor had the property of any of the other occupants been disturbed. There were no marks of violence upon the street doors, and it was evident, without any further revelations from HARCOURT, how the entrance had been effected. But that communicative manner volunteered the information that they had entered No. 48 by means of false keys, and having descended to the roof, reached the scuttle of No. 56 by passing over the houses. No. 48 being unoccupied, and their operations in No. 56 being screened in consequence of their approach by the roof, they had not attracted the attention of the Police patrol, although the enterprise continued several hours. Capt. MCDONNELL taking with him all the goods found in No. 48, returned to the Station-house, and there met another phase of the case in JOHN SULLIVAN, a vendor, lustily demanding his horse and wagon. He stated the team had been hired of him by JACOB WILSON, keeper of a sporting house at No. 62 Wooster-street, and the latter was at once arrested by order of Capt. MCDONNELL. Being brought to the Station-house he proved as reticent as HARCOURT had been unreserved, and resolutely refused to give any hint of the use to which he had put the team. He was therefore locked up, and the horse and wagon will be arraigned this morning at the Jefferson Market Police Court.

Reopening of the Eleventh-Street M. E. Church.

Yesterday the Eleventh-street M. E. Church, near Avenue B, was reopened for Divine service. The church has been thoroughly renovated and remodeled, and presents a very pleasing appearance. The walls are neatly decorated with scrolls and illuminated texts, both of which are the children's offerings. Over the altar hangs a superb banner with a representation of Christ blessing little children. This flag is held by the Mission Schools, twelve in number, in connection with the M. E. Church, for a term of three months—the school that has the largest average attendance holding it for that term. In the morning a most practical and earnest sermon was preached by Rev. C. H. ALTMOSHAFE, who pictured in glowing language the centurion's faith recorded in St. Luke's Gospel. He afterward alluded to the church, which he said had been sanctified in order to make it a more fitting habitation for the Lord, where old and young, rich and poor, might come and pour out their joys and sorrows and lay them at His feet.

In the afternoon the services commenced with the infant classes singing the hymn, "Land Ahead," after which a prayer was offered up by Rev. A. ASTEN, pastor of the Second-street Church; by invoking the blessing of the Almighty on all Sabbath-schools. This was followed by stirring addresses from the Superintendent of the school, Mr. G. W. COLLORD, and Messrs. ASTEN, APPLEGATE, PRYTON and HAMILTON, all of whom spoke earnestly to the children of the benefit of schools, and urged them to be regular in their attendance. Rev. A. ASTEN related his experience as a pastor and Sunday-school teacher, and begged the children to pray daily and earnestly, and to give their hearts to God, and then he thought they might look for success in life, and probably would be able to trace it to the day they first went to Sunday-school.

In the evening a sermon was preached by Rev. J. S. WOLF. A floral festival in connection with the church will be held on Friday evening next.

An Indian War on Long Island.

A highly interesting and important suit is at present pending before Hon. B. W. DOWNING, referee, at Montauk, between the Montauk Indians and the proprietors, as they are designated, who claim that the land occupied by the Indians, and embracing some 900 acres on Montauk Point, belongs to them. Two hundred and eleven years ago the point of land in dispute was purchased by Thomas Baker, Robert Bond, Thomas James, Lion Gardiner, John Mulford, John Hand and Benjoman Price of the wife of Wyandanch, then deceased, and of her sons, Wiancombobe, Zoquabone, Shebanow, Massaquit, Tombo and Gontionas, the consideration being £10 sterling per year for ten years. It seems that the Indians reserved some rights to the land which is now the question in dispute. At present the value of a share, of which there are 500, is $500. These have been subdivided on account of the increase of the proprietors into eighths, and at present there are eighty interests scattered over the entire eastern end of Suffolk County. From time to time the trustees of the proprietors have obtained additional grants from the Indians, restricting the privileges of their tribe and perpetuating the legal rights of the proprietors. In order to prevent the increase of the tribe, a bond was given the proprietors in 1671 whereby the Indians agreed to forfeit £100 for each intermarriage with a Shinnecock Indian or a stranger. In 1719, another bond was given, stronger if possible for the same purpose, and in 1764, yet a third, so that the remaining thirty Indians of the Montauk Tribe are forced to intermarry with their own relations or loose what rights they inherited in their ancient hunting ground. Of late, as the number of Indians decreased, the arrogance of the proprietors increased. While the land was worth a few hundred dollars, they could afford to let the red man live in seclusion and occupy their hunting grounds unmolested, and till their few acres necessary to maintain life during the cold Winter. But now things have changed—a fair million dollars' worth of property cannot and remain idle, consequently an attempt is made to vigorously enforce the bonds restraining marriage that the race may become extinct sooner.

The Case of Ann Kittle—Investigation by the Commission.

From the Troy Budget, June 18.

The Commission to inquire into the mental responsibility of ANN KITTLE for the murder of his father and mother held several meetings during last week and examined a number of witnesses—among them Rev. Dr. SHELDON, KITTLE's spiritual adviser. There was a remarkable unanimity of opinion as to KITTLE's responsibility. The prevailing opinion seemed to be that KITTLE was no more responsible for the killing of his parents than a six-year-old child would be that should commit the same deed. Of course no one is authorized to say positively what the determination of the Commissioners will be as to ANN's responsibility, as no vote or official expression of opinion has been given by the Commissioners on that point. But the indications all point to a verdict exonerating ANN from criminal responsibility. We understand that it is proposed to take the evidence of two or three witnesses from the neighborhood where ANN lived and was brought up, to show what was there thought of him, and as to his opportunities for acquiring knowledge and as to his mental and moral surroundings. This is the first case of examination of a person charged with a capital offense as to moral responsibility for the crime under the act passed by the last Legislature.

Success in the Canal Trade.

From the Buffalo Advertiser, June 17.

We are gratified to be able to report a continuation of the improvement in canal business which we have on several occasions noticed already this season, as compared with the statistics of previous years. The exports from Buffalo of flour and the different kinds of grain, from the opening of canal navigation to and including June 12, for the years 1868, 1869, 1870 and 1871, were as follows:

	1871.	1870.	1869.	1868.
Flour	6,120	9,195	9,020	231
Wheat	2,754,450	3,750,240	2,915,423	1,574,671
Corn	1,000,000	1,000,000	1,870,000	2,000,000
Oats	214,410	274,248	323,455	3,005,501
Barley	77,400			6,625
Rye	42,000	10,005	7,000	7,948
Total grain	4,112,450	4,821,388	4,954,279	7,279,522

The improvement is very marked. The shipments of breadstuffs this season are nearly double those of the same period last year, and largely in excess of those of either of the two previous years. This is very encouraging, especially when we take into account the unfavorable circumstances under which the business of the season was inaugurated.

The total amount of canal tolls collected at this port, from the opening of navigation to June 17, 1871, is $213,716 07; for the same period last year the sum was $165,177 07, showing an increase of $37,538 80 for this year.

The National College Regatta—Five Colleges to be Represented.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, June 17.

It is now definitely decided that the coming College Regatta is to take place the 21st of July, and the affair has assumed such proportions that its success may be confidently predicted. The rumors that some of the colleges have decided to withdraw from the contest are erroneous. At least five colleges will be represented in the University races, and three in the Freshmen races. Boat-houses for the different boats are to be at once erected on the river bank opposite Ingleside, and accommodations for the crews will be found in the vicinity. The Springfield Club, with characteristic energy and public spirit, have secured the Regatta Committee of their hearty co-operation, and in addition to taking charge of the whole details relative to the College races, will offer prizes for four other races, open to all crews, one of them for single skulls. The College races will be three straight miles, starting just above Ingleside and finishing near the Chicopee Bridge; the others one mile and a half and repeat. From many points a complete view of the whole course may be secured. A band of music will be on the ground, steam-boats will run from Springfield to the course; the railroads will afford every facility for transportation, and everything possible will be done to make the regatta a success.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

There is a wooden statue of the traditional "Jim Crow," of plantation memory, now marked and cracked with age, and with one arm off, that has traveled all over America, voyaged across the Atlantic, and been in all the principal cities of Great Britain. The statue was carved by T. D. RICE, the original "Jim Crow," and was by him once placed on the stage of the Bowery Theatre, at one of the wings, while MR. RICE in the same attitude stood opposite, and the audience were pleased to distinguish the genuine from the counterfeit. The statue has found a resting place with a saloon-keeper on Broadway, who became its guardian on the decease of the comedian.

Never were there so many alterations in buildings in the Seventh Ward as at present. What were formerly the dwellings of single families are now having extra stories added, and being generally altered into tenement houses. The back yards of these houses are also being built upon, and a system of stowage of human beings is about to be inaugurated which, though it may inure to the profit of property-owners, will not add to the health or morality of that quarter of the City. The many well-to-do families once living there are fast giving way to a different population.

An increase in the number of suits for divorces may be confidently looked for. The divorce lawyers are beginning to advertise more extensively than ever. Couples who might otherwise get over their little differences, have an ill-advised remedy suggested for many imaginary wrongs, and these legal harpies who thrive on the fruits of family jars, lend an ever willing and sympathic ear to matrimonial complaints, exaggerate the fancied slight, increase the bitterness and fill their pockets with filthy lucre.

The forty-sixth annual exhibition of the National Academy of Design was closed on Saturday evening. Mr. ADDISON RICHARDS, the Secretary, estimates that it has been visited by about 40,000 people. The second Summer exhibition will open today. Besides the ordinary works, the Student collection, numbering about 100 American and foreign works, will be on view in the library-rooms. These pictures were left to the institution by the late Mr. JAMES A. SUYDAM, and were accompanied by $10,000 for the benefit of the school fund.

"Ice-water, 1 cent a glass," is inscribed on a small sign on Eighth-street, near Third-avenue. This recalls the days before the Croton reservoir, when water was peddled in our streets from casks filled at the big pump in Pearl-street. In the present instance the water is sold to car drivers, by an old man employed by the Third-avenue Railroad Company to water their horses. He lays a tax of one cent on the drivers to pay for ice and his trouble. It is a custom on other roads.

There is a driver on the Eighth-avenue Railroad who carries a whip which he has carried for eight years, and it has the same piece of whip-cord at the end as it had when he bought it. He has a pet name for each one of the horses he drives during the day, and he states that a re-echoing of the names he calls them in the course of a journey has a livelier effect than all the whips upon the horses.

Never ask a favor of a man with a vacuum in his stomach, but wait until he has dined; for, as SHAKESPEARE says, "when those pipes are filled with wine and feeding the soul is subtler than in its priestly fasts." Little beggars who ask alms in front of restaurants must be students of SHAKESPEARE, for they invariably beg pennies from those coming out, and seldom accost those entering.

The practice among boys of jumping on the couplings and buffers of railway cars, along West-street and Tenth-avenue, ought to be stopped. If the policemen along the route would secure one or two of them, or if the railway company would cause a few to be sent to the Long Island farms, there would be less work for the Coroners and their juries. One death and several serious accidents have been the result of the practice within a month past.

Now that the season for picnics and excursions is fairly begun, there is a rapid growth in public love-making. Individual cases, whose affection has been stimulated by quiet walks in shady groves, find it impossible to stay their love even in public street-cars, and embracing, hand-squeezing, and all the natural adjuncts of love-making, are bedeviling fellow-passengers on the cars in the evening. Love laughs at circumstances as well as at locksmiths.

The examination of the Hebrew Free Schools took place in Steinway Hall yesterday morning. There are four schools under the charge of the Association—one day school and three evening schools. The examination, which was highly satisfactory, was interspersed with dialogues and recitations. The officers of the Hebrew School Association and a number of prominent gentlemen were present.

"There is a dead man in the gallery," was now the cry when an orator speaks so low that he cannot be heard all over the house. It originated in a meeting in Brooklyn, at which a man, annoyed by the low tones of the speaker, stepped on to the platform, and, putting his lips to the ear of the latter, used the expression in a stentorian whisper.

When you buy strawberries be careful to have the huckasters turn them out, so that you can see them in the bottom of the basket. If they turn out well, take them. The goodly fruit on the top conceals the rottenness beneath. This rule will apply to the purchase of all berries, and will lead to the exposure of dishonest venders, who will be known by their fruits.

Some capitalists say said to be about to rent a steam-boat from the foot of Dey-street, or thereabouts, to carry passengers at a cheap rate ferriage to Harlem, from the North River side. The departings are to be arranged similar to those of the East River boats. Anything to afford additional means of speedy and comfortable transit will be hailed with satisfaction.

It is a very suggestive fact how comparatively few people find it conducive to their health to make a Sunday visit to Central Park, Jersey City and Hoboken, since the liquor-dealers of New-York are required only to keep their business places closed instead of being forbidden to sell liquor on Sunday.

The Life Association of America—Annual Reports of President and Consulting Actuary.

From the New-York Underwriter for May, 1871.

On page 111 in this issue we publish the annual report of J. H. BRITTON, Esq., President of the Association. It is an interesting document, terse, forcible and aggressive. Mr. BRITTON claims for the Association absolute precedence in the business of Life Insurance in 1870.

Following Mr. BRITTON's report, Hon. WM. BARNES, the Consulting Counsel and Actuary of the Association, has published a remarkably able, elaborate and voluminous comparative review of life insurance in all countries under the title of a report to the Board of Directors of the Association, dated May 1, 1871. We have read and pondered over this report with particular interest, admiring the research it displays, as well as the analytical and statistical talent exhibited by its distinguished and enthusiastic author, so much laudation, however, challenges controversy. Notwithstanding Mr. BRITTON and Mr. BARNES, we are not satisfied that the Life Association of America at St. Louis is the greatest Life Insurance organization in the country—that it is the true Golden Calf, which we are all to bow down to and worship, or that we must forego our allegiance to and affection for all the tried and trusted Companies in these Eastern States, which we have heretofore held in honor and esteem, and lift up our voices in adulation of this new thing west of the Mississippi. Let us see.

The Life Association was chartered as the Life Association of Missouri in the year 1868, and its charter was amended in October, 1869, constituting it the "Life Association of America," which was a pardonable bit of Legislative vanity for that progressive section of country. The scheme was large, broad and comprehensive. We give the projectors ample credit for boldness, pluck, skill and audacity. By the plan of Departmental or Local Boards the whole country was to be fanned in around or converging toward St. Louis as the pivotal point of action.

The Association was designed to startle Europe, and was undoubtedly supported by good, solid, responsible citizens of St. Louis. As shrewdly expected by the promoters, the Local Board idea was well received all over the West, taking in enough of leading men at all the prominent points as Local Trustees, who were gratified at being advertised as such, and accepted ostensibly to control and look out the premium taken in each place. Each trustee had to qualify in a $10,000 policy, and it is understood that to induce these policies it was held out that the trustees should have some credit for commission on the business transacted in their respective departments as would make their own annual premiums very light. This was fair enough as a trade operation, but it was not life insurance, pure and simple, nor either. Most of the policies taken out by such local trustees were endowment policies entered into on speculation, and dependent for their permanence very materially on the success of the business through such trustees at each place.

Now, at the close of 1870, we find that the Association returned an asset account of $2,644,—— of which there was $1,156,479 24 in real estate funds, such as Mr. BARNES, in his own State official period, would have called convertible into the lawful currency of the United States. The residue of the asset account was made up as follows:

Collateral loans on various securities, consisting some United States bonds, amount not specified	$88,522 [illegible]
Premiums in hands of agents, &c.	410,577 [illegible]
Office furniture	6,224 [illegible]
Deferred premiums	127,194 [illegible]
Other loans	8,000 [illegible]
Premium notes	223,461 [illegible]
Office furniture and reinsurance	14,[illegible]
Total	$1,[illegible]

Against that asset accumulation the liability for unpaid losses, reinsurance, reserve, &c., was returned at $2,307,070 44.

Under the income heading there was returned as cash received for premiums $2,[illegible] and interest, and profit

BASE-BALL.

Another Victory for the Forest City Club—Signal Defeat of the Rockfords.

The Forest City Club, of Cleveland, which organization arrived here Friday, on Saturday played their first game this season with the Rockfords, of Brooklyn, in the presence of a large concourse of spectators; considerable interest being manifested in regard to the result, the recent victories of the Cleveland nine over the Haymakers, of Troy, and the Boston nine, having placed them high in the list of championship contenders. Both clubs were in fine trim for play, and put in their full strength.

The game began shortly after 3 P. M., with the visiting club at the bat, and so sharp was the fielding on both sides that not a run was scored by either party until the fifth inning, and only then by some errors, the Rockfords not scoring a solitary run until the fifth inning, and then the run they obtained was through a muff and a wild throw. The Forest City nine frequently had two bassmen on earned bases, but before a run could be earned the side was put out. In the fifth inning, however, they "scratched" runs in, and in their eighth they batted in five men for 5, four of which were earned. The final result of the contest was their well-earned success by a score of 7 to 1, after the best contested game the Rockfords have been engaged in. The display made by the Forest City nine in this game will cause their match with the Mutuals on Monday a very interesting one, and no doubt a large crowd will be present to witness it. Nerson bore off the palm in the field, and Hicks at the bat on the Eckford side, and Sutton and Kimball on the part of the Cleveland nine. The following is the score:

Star vs. Amity.

Saturday, the Stars had a practice match with the Amity nine, the champion juniors of Brooklyn, and after a pretty game of nine innings, in which some fine play was shown on both sides, the Stars won by a score of 10 to 8. Cummings pitched up to the close of the seventh inning, at which time the score stood at 7 to 1 in favor of the Stars. The following is the score:

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

During the past week the business transacted at the Exchange in City property has been light, and but few sales have been effected, the total value of real estate sold within the week ending with Saturday, June 17, amounting to but $54,220, as against $609,300 for the week previous, ending Saturday, June, 10. The latter figures can hardly be taken, however, as a criterion of the Summer business, for they embrace the result of the Dyckman auction, an exceptional transaction. The sales of City realty made at the Exchange last week occurred on Monday, June 12, and on Wednesday, June 14, on the first of which days, V. K. STEVENSON & Son disposed of property valued at $1,750, while on the latter JOSEPH MCGUIRE sold a gore lot on Forty-second street, for $7,500.

In the matter of suburban sales, the market has been more active, and several have been consummated successfully. Namely, at Rutherford Park, N. J., on Wednesday, June 14, 300 lots, sold by A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & Bro., for $60,000, and at Flatbush, Long Island, on Thursday, June 15, 165 lots, sold by JOHNSON & MILLER, for $30,000. In addition to these sales, MILLER, WILKINS & CO. sold at the Exchange, on Wednesday, a country seat at Edgewater, Staten Island, for $19,300. JAMES C. FLEURY sold, at Jamaica, Long Island, on the same day, a small tract of land for $1,200, and on Tuesday, June 13, JOHNSON & MILLER, on the ground, sold twelve lots, located near Rutherford Park, N. J., for about $2,700. The total value of suburban property reported sold during the week amounts, therefore, to $132,200. The corresponding figures for the previous week were $91,285, to which must be added the sum of $2,945, the result of a sale held at Grand View Park, Staten Island, on Saturday, June 10, making the total for the week ending on this date, $94,230; excess in value for week ending Saturday, June 17, $39,990.

In Brooklyn, on Thursday, June 15, the sales of real estate made were noticeable. J. Cozzn, at the Commercial Exchange, disposing of improved Williamsburg property to the value of $112,950, while COZZ & MURPHY, at their salesroom, No. 279 Fulton-street, sold 300 city lots located near Prospect Park, the sale aggregating nearly $100,000.

THIS WEEK'S BUSINESS.

For the present week but few noticeable auctions are advertised, and business will, in all probability, be dull. The following are the principal sales to take place, and to them attention is directed: At Vanderbilt Landing, Staten Island, today, at 3 P. M., on the premises, JOHNSON & MILLER will offer for sale 120 choice building lots, situated respectively on Vanderbilt avenue, Richmond road, and on Simonson, Metcalfe and Gaff streets. All the lots are well located, and suitable for immediate improvement. WICKOFF & LITTLE also hold an important auction today at Valley Stream, Long Island. Special train at 9¼ o'clock this morning.

To-morrow, Tuesday, June 20, on the ground, at 12½ P. M., A. D. MELLICK, JR. & BRO., will begin the sale of the well-known Oakland property, on the line of the Central Railway of New-Jersey, between Cranford and Westfield, and

THE NEW CAPITOL.

Preparations for the Laying of the Corner-Stone.

A Chapter from History—Sketch of the Old Capitol—Origin of the New Movement and Its Progress.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, N. Y., Thursday, June 15, 1871.

The near approach of the time when the corner-stone of the new Capitol is to be laid invests with some interest the proceedings that marked the construction of its predecessor, the present well-known building. Up to 1804 the people were satisfied that the old structure, on the corner of Broadway and Hudson streets, in the City of Albany, was sufficiently capacious to do all of the business necessary to run the State of New-York, and they, therefore, made no movement toward superseding it by a better. Former, however, the citizens possessed themselves with the idea that the building was not large enough to properly house the assembled wisdom of the State of New-York, and they therefore moved the Legislature to pass a law appointing Commissioners to proceed and build a State-house that should properly accommodate the demands of the State. This bill entitled "An act making provisions for improving Hudson River below the City of Albany, and for other purposes," was passed on the 6th day of April, 1804. It named JOHN TAYLOR, DANIEL HALE, PHILIP S. VAN RENSSELAER, (then Mayor of Albany,) SIMEON DE WITT and NICHOLAS F. QUACKENBUSH, Commissioners to project and erect a building suitable for the public purposes of the State, and for the Courts and offices of the City of Albany. It authorized the levying of a tax upon the County of Albany of $6,000, and upon the City of Albany of a like sum. This is explained by the fact that at this time the building was intended to be built by and to belong to the Corporation of Albany. The bill further authorized the managers of lotteries, created in "An act for the encouragement of literature," to raise the sum of $12,000, in addition to the sums already provided, and when such sum was raised to pay it over to the Commissioners. Each Commissioner gave a bond in the penal sum of $20,000 to the people of the State to faithfully perform his duties under the act, and to account every six months to the Controller. They were also empowered to sell the old State-house.

Having now a certain capital on which to proceed, the Commissioners proceeded to engage their architect, one HOOKER, and to make estimates of the probable cost of the venture. The amount upon which they finally proceeded appears in an estimate in the handwriting of SIMEON DE WITT, filed in the office of the State Engineer, as have been $120,000. Ground was broken, and for nearly two years the work went on. On the 7th day of March, 1807, the available money having been expended, the Commissioners report to the Legislature as follows:

AMOUNT REQUIRED IN CONSTRUCTION OF THE STATE-HOUSE.

To inclose building	$10,000
To complete interior	20,000
Portico	6,000
Total	$36,000

This proposed a wooden cornice and roof, and if the work was done in stone and slate, then $10,000 additional would be needed.

AMOUNT RECEIVED BY COMMISSIONERS.

From sale of City Hall	$17,[illegible]
Tax on City and County of Albany	4,000
Given by Corporation of Albany	10,000
Total	$31,[illegible]

This sum of $26,[illegible] had already been expended, and there only remained provided for by law, the $12,000 authorized to be raised by lottery. The Commissioners report that not less than $20,000 more will be required. The report goes on to say that the work could have been done for a less sum if brick had been used instead of stone, but that the Commissioners would have considered that they had erred in their duty had they used less substantial material. That the State has as yet made no contribution, the whole burden of building so far, except the $6,000 taxed upon the County of Albany, having been borne by the city. The Commissioners close by asking further aid, and saying that the strictest economy had marked the construction of the work. This was referred to a Committee composed of Messrs. SLUSS, C. PLATT, SHELDON, VAN OLINDA and MORRISON, on the 27th of March, 1807. This Committee asked to be discharged from further consideration of the report. This was done, and upon motion, a joint Committee were appointed, and they recommended that the State advance $20,000 to the Commissioners, to be repaid by a lottery. This was done, and the pot was kept boiling for a while longer.

On the 24th of March, 1808, the Commissioners made the following detailed report of the sums received by them:

From tax on City of Albany	$6,000
From tax on County of Albany	3,000
From Corporation of Albany	10,000
From City Hall sale	17,[illegible]
From proceeds of lottery	12,000
From the State, to be reimbursed by a lottery	20,000
From extra donation by Corporation of Albany	4,000
Total	$[illegible]

They estimate that $25,000 more will be required, and state that if that sum is given by the State the City of Albany will level and beautify the grounds about the building. This was referred to a committee, and on the 29th of March, 1808, they reported a bill, which was passed on the 8th of April, giving the $25,000 required on condition that the corporation of Albany secure to the people of the State the use of such apartments in the new buildings as the Legislature may require for public purposes, and that they further execute a bond to the people of the State, in the penal sum of $50,000, to faithfully perform such act; and also, that the Corporation of Albany immediately proceed to level and ornament the grounds. This was evidently done, for on the 17th day of March, 1809, the final report of the Commissioners is made, and they say nothing of any neglect by the City of Albany. The report is as follows:

Expended in erecting the State-house, for [illegible]	$97,[illegible]
On hand in money and material	3,000 00

and stones by saying, that the furniture to be used will vary in quality, so that no estimate can be made upon the additional amount required to complete the work. The report is signed by JOHN TAYLOR, Chairman Board of Commissioners.

The Legislature in the Supply bill of 1809 appropriated $6,000 to complete the furnishing of the building. This failing to accomplish that result, on the 30th of March, 1809, the last act relating to the erection of the old Capitol was passed, and $6,000 was appropriated to finally end the job. Up to the date of this act the building had been known as the State-house, it now became known as the Capitol. According to these figures the entire cost of the building, furniture and all, was not less than $136,000. The Capitol building remained the property of the city until about the time the present City Hall was built, when for $80,000, and the privilege of quarrying marble from the City Stone Works, the city sold its interest to the State. Very little is said about the corner-stone of the Capitol building, and it is impossible to find any record of its situation or contents. In the Albany Gazette of April 28, 1806, the following appears:

"Yesterday the corner-stone of the new State-house, to be erected in this city, was laid by Hon. P. S. VAN RENSSELAER, in presence of the Chancellor, Judges of the Supreme Court, members of the Corporation, State-house Commissioners, and other respectable citizens. The site upon which this edifice is to be erected is at the head of State-street, on the west side of the public park. It is to be built of stone, is 100 by 50 feet, on an improved plan, embracing much elegance with convenience and durability."

And this is all that was said in the papers of that day of the laying of the corner-stone of the venerable building now the head-quarters of the Tammany organization. It was not considered necessary in those days to call in the Masons to perform the duty that lay directly in the province of the Mayor, as Mr. VAN RENSSELAER then was; and it is very unfortunate that Mr. HOFFMAN does not feel qualified to perform a duty which he, as the representative of the people, is justly called upon to perform.

The history of the new Capitol, since the time when it became an established fact by the action of the Legislature, may not be uninteresting. Certainly the vast sums of money already spent to bring it to a position where the first layer of superstructure may be laid interests the taxpayers of the State. The quarrels over appropriations, the jealousies of Commissioners—all these things have been frequently written; but now they are all to be buried under the corner-stone, and the world go on to an early completion. On the 27th day of January, 1865, the Senate adopted the following resolution, and thenceforward the building of a Capitol became a State burden:

Resolved, That a select committee of three be appointed by the President of the Senate, to ascertain by correspondence or otherwise, with the City of Buffalo and other municipalities of the State, on what terms the grounds and buildings necessary for a new Capitol and public offices can be obtained, and that said committee report as soon as possible.

On the Committee were appointed WM. LAMPREE, Jr., C. J. FOLGER, O. M. ALLEN, who, on the 16th of February, 1865, sent to the different cities and towns in the State a circular, stating the nature of their appointment, and asking that reports be made from different portions of the State of the premises available for the purposes of a new Capitol, the cost and ease of procuring building materials, facilities of travel, statistics of health, size and population of town, and other matters of general interest. An answer was required as early as the 1st of March. This was sent to the Mayor of the cities in the State and to two hundred villages. In not bringing the desired responses, another circular was sent on the 11th of March, asking that the request be attended to, and that the replies be sent in by the 20th inst. Further saying that a meeting would hold by the Committee on the 22d of March to hear any parties interested. On the 20th of March the Committee reported that they had received numerous letters in reply to their circular, that the City of New-York offered a site on the Battery, City Hall Park, Tompkins-square, Mount Morris-square, Central Park or Washington Heights, and to erect, free of expense to the State, all the necessary buildings, and to furnish a plot on Fifth-avenue one hundred feet square, opposite the Central Park, and erect an executive mansion thereon. Yonkers tendered three beautiful sites for Capitol and State-houses. Saratoga Springs offered sites and such a sum of money as the State should think proper. The village of Whitestown proposed to donate any quantity of ground. The City of Albany offered the square known as the Congress Hall property. Buffalo, Oswego and Utica declined to have anything to do with the matter. The village of Athens, better known as the end of VANDERBILT'S White Elephant Railroad, made liberal propositions, and one ALONZO GREENE appeared before the Committee and made arguments in its favor. The strongest argument being that he was the only person who had attended the call of the Committee. The Committee say that if the capital is removed they consider that the City of New-York is the proper place for it, but they doubt the propriety of its removal; and conclude with a recommendation that the bill for the erection of a new Capitol in Albany be passed. The Committee publish in an appendix twenty-four communications from different portions of the State. One from Margaretville, Delaware County, breaks into verse and opens thus:

"Amid the wilds of Delaware,
From politics and war afar,
Encircled by the snow-clad hills,
And called by trickling mountain rills,
There sleeps a little village white,
And from that pretty town I write.
What is its name? Well, if you will,
The people call it Margaretville."

This writer goes on to say that the postman, as usual, went his rounds that afternoon with a letter directed to the village President. The place had no President, and so the postmaster must break the seal. Then comes the picture of Margaretville, as the centre of hurrying crowds and the hope of future Legislatures. This fades away as the material questions of the Committee are appreciated. The poet offers everything:

"Take what you will—we'll nought refuse—
Pay when you will, and as you choose;
Or, like Van Rensselaer of old,
Possess the lands and keep your gold."

Closing with an appeal for the health of the Governor and the State officers who are to be saved by the air of Delaware, the poet subsides.

The other communications are tame and commonplace. On the 1st day of May, 1865, the Legislature passed a law providing that when the City of Albany shall donate to the State the plot of ground known as Congress Hall Block, then the Governor is authorized to appoint three Commissioners, to be known as the New Capitol Commissioners, who shall proceed to procure plans, &c., at the expense of the City of Albany, for a proper building to be used as a Capitol. The building to be located on the site of the present Capitol. Ten thousand dollars were appropriated by the State for general purposes. The city having made the donation of the property in the following February, the Governor appointed HAMILTON HARRIS, JNO. V. L. PRUYN and O. B. LATHAM Commissioners. On the 14th of April, 1866, a bill was passed that stated that, inasmuch as the City of Albany had complied with the terms of the original act, the site of the Capitol is hereby ratified and confirmed. No money was appropriated this year. On the 2d of April, 1867, the sum of $[illegible] was appropriated, followed May 19, 1868, by another amount of $250,000, and an increase in the Commission of five members, namely: J. S. Thayer, A. B. Cornell, W. A. Rice, James Terwilliger and John T. Hudson.

Constant quarrels had existed since the forming of the Commission between Messrs. HARRIS and LATHAM, resulting in memorials from the latter gentleman to the Legislature, in which he charged waste of public money, &c. This, however, did not avail anything, and in 1869 the Legislature appropriated $400,000 for buying lands and proceeding in the construction of the building. There had been a constant endeavor upon the part of the people from several localities to effect a change of location after it was found that the new Capitol was a certain thing, and bills were introduced to change the site, at every session. Endeavors to block the appropriations, &c., were the common labors of the Assembly. On the special bill of 1870 to levy a tax to raise $1,300,000, this opposition became very strong. But the danger blew over, and the appropriation was made. Up to this time, therefore, the account stands:

Appropriated by chapter 210, Laws 1869, to buy lands	$70,000
Donated by the City of Albany	6,000
Appropriated by the State for plans, &c., 1868	10,000
Donated by City of Albany, (Congress Hall Block)	25,000
Appropriated by chapter 446, laws 1867	250,000
Appropriated by chapter 820, laws 1868	250,000
Appropriated by chapters 845 and 924 laws 1869	400,000
Appropriated by chapter 402, laws 1870	1,300,000
Total	$2,311,000
Amount paid for land	410,200
Expenses of building to Jan. 1, 1871	$1,941,000

This year the Legislature appropriated $650,000 and appointed a new Commission, composed of W. A. Rice, H. Harris, W. C. Kingsley, E. A. Merritt, Delos De Wolf and C. Depew. The Superintendent claims that he can finish the work so that the Assembly of 1874 can hold their sessions in the building, only asking for money. The law of 1868 limited the expenditure to four million dollars, but since the corner-stone rests on two million dollars, it is hardly possible that the intention of that body will be carried out. The Masons over the State are making every preparation to have the ceremonies of the 24th the most august that have ever illustrated the records of the country. Every Lodge in the Commonwealth will be represented by a committee, and the uniforms will be as gorgeous as the possibilities of Masonic properties will allow. At first a feeling of opposition developed among the anti-Masons of the State, but as the show is of no political significance, and the Order claim to have officiated at the inception of Solomon's Temple, it has been judged best to let them go on and play their play.

A Georgia Denunciation of the New Departure.

From the Columbus (Ga.) Sun, June 14.

The late victory, and still later organization of a Democratic Legislature in New-Hampshire, and the gallant fight in the old Nutmeg State; the cry of the repeal of the infamous amendments by the noble LESLIE, the Democratic candidate for Governor in Kentucky; the echo of CARLISLE on the same ticket with LESLIE—"The amendments are not dead issues, and politicians can't kill them with resolutions;" the manly utterances of the brave soldier BLAIR and SCHURZ and thousands of noble orators and pirates North and West, are all name that liberty in the United States is not dead and tyranny has not yet triumphed. In the midst of the bright omens of a goodly morrow, like a clap of thunder in a clear sky, comes unheralded a furious tempest from the Northwest. No political Notes could have engendered a more deadly wind than the one christened the "New Departure." It is a new departure in Democrats, from all the records of the party as to Constitutional law. It is the cerement of stultification; the caress of a scend of proper spirit and self-respect, indicated in advance of the National Convention, a craven hope and faith in our cause and country, as war with all our professions that man is capable of self-government, and that the Republican Party is not best suited to the genius and virtues of our people. It will be found on trial weak and rickety, with no backbone save of policy.

THE PAPAL JUBILEE.

Appropriate Services in the Catholic Churches Yesterday—The Last Day of the Triduum.

In accordance with the directions contained in the recent circular of Archbishop MCCLOSKEY, respecting the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Pontificate of Pius IX., special religious services were performed in each of the Catholic churches yesterday, in expression of their sense of gratitude and thankfulness for the unprecedentedly long reign of the Pope. The occasion was marked by a discourse of condolence on account of the limitation of his temporal power, and fervent prayers were offered up for his continued health and safety, for his deliverance from the hands of his enemies, and the speedy restoration of all his privileges. The Triduum, or three-days' offering, was proclaimed for the purpose of rendering the celebration more general and complete by affording the working classes an opportunity to participate. Yesterday the churches were filled with ardent worshipers. The number of communicants was unusually large because of the plenary indulgence accorded to all who appropriately celebrate the festival. The churches were handsomely decorated with flowers and other ornaments appropriate to the occasion, the choirs were unusually effective, and in the majority of instances solemn high mass was celebrated. Addresses were delivered by the most eminent Catholic ministers in the City on the subject of infallibility in its relation to modern Christianity generally, the life of Pius IX., the lessons of his career and the singular events in connection with Papal history, his extraordinary long reign. With one or two exceptions the exercises were not marked by that great pomp and ceremony that characterized Friday's celebration, but the absence of display was explained by additional religious fervor and closer attention to Christian service. Transparencies, Chinese lanterns, and the host of other contrivances that attract the eye without exciting any religious emotions were entirely dispensed with, and honest worth happier in appreciating in a calm, pious and practical manner the spirit of the hour. The Archbishop was expected to deliver an oration at the cathedral, but was compelled to forego his intention on a call for the administration of the sacrament of confirmation at Yonkers. The services were continued through the day, and closed with vespers.

DISCOURSE BY REV. FATHER PARSONS.

The Roman Catholic Church of St. Ann's was well filled, yesterday, by an audience assembled to listen to a discourse by Rev. Father PARSONS, on the "Life and Pontificate of Pius IX." After the mass, Dr. PARSONS delivered the sermon substantially as follows:

The Catholic Church celebrates throughout the world her day of jubilee, and has much to be thankful for. She has ever prepared herself to hear the cross of the Lord, and amongst the first conditions imposed upon her is to fill up what remains behind of His passion. She has had many victories, perhaps all unseen by mortal eye, but known to God and to her own heart. Today she celebrates the anniversary of her own Pontiff, who has been permitted to live to the twenty-fifth year of his Pontificate, and, as Peter was cast a prisoner, so is our Pope a prisoner in his own capital. Yet it is a day of joy and congratulation, notwithstanding, and throughout the world Te Deums are sent up in honor of the event. It is proper that I should at this occasion call your attention to the facts and circumstances of this Pontificate. Those who write the history of the Church will write no brighter name than that of Pius IX. The reverend father then proceeded to relate the principal facts in the life of the Pope. He was born in 1792, and is therefore eighty years of age. He was ordained a priest when eighteen years of age, and was at once placed in positions of trust, honor and honor. He labored in South America, where he was highly respected. When he returned to the Papal States he was made Archbishop and then Bishop, and subsequently, in 1829, was made a Cardinal. On the death of GREGORY XVI., in 1846, PIUS IX. was elected on the 16th of June, and has therefore filled the twenty-five years of his sacred office. Immediately on his creation the Pope resolved to ameliorate the temporal condition of his subjects, and determined to try a liberal Government, but his efforts terminated unsuccessfully, for, unwilling to go to war with Austria, he retired from his stand, and was unable to resist the tide that flowed around his palace; his Minister was assassinated, and the Pope was made a prisoner in his own city; he would have lost his life then had he not escaped from the Holy City in disguise. The insurgents took possession of Rome, and the Catholic Princes were appealed to to restore the Pope to his throne, which they did, and the Holy Father entered Rome again in 1850, through the aid of Austria, France and Spain. From that day to this there has been no more peaceful reign in the Europe of this Ancient, and the spot where civil and religious liberty could be more thoroughly enjoyed. He then devoted himself to the government of the Church, with what results we already know. During this period he founded the idea of the immaculate conception, and on Dec. 8, 1854, the Pope defined this article of Catholic faith. Since then his reign has been distinguished by the canonization of the Japanese martyrs, the eighteenth centenary of St. Peter, and other grand events. The movement of the Italian people for unity was one which nothing could stop, like the movement for German unity, it could be accomplished, and NAPOLEON touched the spark which kindled the fire consuming his own throne. He was the champion of Italian unity, but the first movement resulted in the loss of the Italian provinces and the overthrow of the temporal power of the Pope. NAPOLEON then said that he would not permit the Pope to be stripped of his patrimony, and therefore left his soldiers to guard the Pope. When NAPOLEON went to war with Germany he withdrew his troops. When NAPOLEON fell VICTOR EMMANUEL sent his troops to take possession of Rome and thus the Pope became a prisoner. The city is overrun by a Commune who would as soon assassinate the Pope as one of his priests. If VICTOR EMMANUEL dares to go to Rome and raise his throne there he, too, may be overthrown. Who knows how long the Holy Father will be permitted to exercise his high functions? He prayers go up unceasingly for the deliverance of the head of the Church. The speaker said that among all the Pontificates in the history of the Church, none had made more progress than this in the extension of the Church and the erection of new sees. Pius IX. is not only distinguished in his own Church, but is revered by other nations, and is admired by other denominations of Christians. As a Doctor of the Church the Pope has spoken from hour to hour words of golden wisdom. This is the day when we fight not so much against heresy as against infidelity. The creeds outside the Church are giving up their dogmas, and it is the duty of the Church to see that this does not result in infidelity. The Pope has declared the incarnation of the Son of God, and on this rock we stand or fall. He that denieth Christ denieth the Father and Son. In that Syllabus what golden words for our age! How little do they who contend against it know of it. In that Syllabus the Holy Father protects society, and prevents us from relapsing into anarchy. It only asserts doctrines which are essential to a just and stable government. The education of our children is inculcated by the Pope. It is the tenet of the day to let children grow up without religious education, but inspired by his hand we will raise up our temples of education for youth where they may be taught the truths that any system of education which separates the temporal from the spiritual must not be tolerated. The Pope has condemned the system of liberal Christianity, and we, too, should see that this heresy is not suffered to make progress. In the late Council the Pope has received the title of Infallible, and he that departs in word or deed from this definition is cut off from the body of Christ. The battle now rests with infidelity, and not with heresy. The speaker said that he had been born in darkness and heresy, but came into the Church because he saw that he was living in error, and when he received the benediction he solemnly declared that he would live and die in Peter's faith. Who shall say that the Pope may not yet be an exile or a martyr in his eighteenth year? He gives us an example of living faith, and he knows that, if not now at least hereafter, the tenets of the Church will prevail both against heresy and infidelity. We believe that God will carry to the Church her temporal victory and that before long the Pope will reign, as of old, in the Holy City. In conclusion, the reverend Father invoked the prayers of the Church for the Pope and the success of the holy faith. The Te Deum was sung and the congregation was dismissed.

SERVICES AT THE CATHEDRAL.

At the Cathedral, yesterday, the occasion of the celebration of the Pontificate of the Pope was celebrated with unusual pomp. Several additional masses were celebrated and the Te Deum was sung in pursuance of the circular of the Archbishop. At the 10½ o'clock mass, Father KEARNEY officiating, the choir, which was of unusual strength, sang MAIFRT MERCADANTE'S Mass in D Minor, the singers, Mme. ONOME, soprano; Mrs. UNGER, alto; Mr. H. SCHMITZ, tenor; Mr. VIELING, basso, and Mr. GUSTAVUS SCHMITZ, organist. "Te Deum," Lambiotte; first chorus, "Te Gloriosus," soprano solo; "Tu Rex," solo, quartette; "Non Confundar" finale. The responses were made by Very Rev. Dr. VARNUM, Vicar-General. Rev. Father CLEARY delivered an address on the unity of the Church, observing that no better evidence of its title to that characteristic could be found than in the manner of its celebration of the festival. Predictions had been made by a partisan Press of its downfall under its recent disasters, but he said, although one by one the Papal Provinces had fallen on all sides by demons in the shape of men, although the powers of hell and darkness seem combined for his overthrow, no Catholic entertains a particle of fear for his safety. He slightly adverted to the tribulations of the Sovereign Pontiff, and the circumstances connected with the Council, the Syllabus of infallibility, and concluded by remarking that notwithstanding adversities and trials the Church was daily gaining in strength and power and diffusing the light of Christianity throughout the entire world.

THE GERMAN CATHOLIC CHURCHES.

In the German Roman Catholic Churches the closing services in commemoration of the Pope's jubilee took place, yesterday, and drew a large attendance. In the Church of Redemptorists, in Third-street, the services commenced early in the morning with the celebration of high mass, and were followed by special services and high mass at 10 o'clock, when a sermon was preached by Rev. Father HOLKEN. In the afternoon vesper services were held. The consecration of the sacrament and a Te Deum concluded the celebration. A procession was formed in front of the school building in Fourth-street, in the following order:

Music corps; a rifle company; the Young of the Holy Family; St. Aloysius Benevolent Society; the Men of the Holy Family; music corps; the Papal banner; St. Joseph's Society; St. Johannes' Society; St. Jacobus' Society; St. Tiberius' Society; music corps; Alphonsus' Society; Family Protective Association.

The procession passed through Fourth-street, First-avenue, Third-street, Avenue C, Fifth-street to Avenue B, and Tompkins-square; through Avenue A, Sixth-street, Fifth-street, Avenue B and Fourth-street to the school-house.

In the evening, at 7 o'clock, the closing services of the celebration took place in the church in Third-street. The celebration in the German Catholic Church in Second-street was also of an imposing character, and drew a large attendance. The streets in the vicinity of the churches and the line of the procession presented a festive appearance, and many public and private buildings were profusely decorated with bunting, and the German, American and Papal flags.

SERVICES AT ST. VINCENT DE PAUL'S.

The celebration of the anniversary of the twenty-fifth Pontificate of His Holiness Pope Pius IX., at the French Catholic Church of St. Vincent de Paul, on Twenty-third-street, was marked with unusual splendor. The spacious edifice was brilliantly illuminated inside, from its base to its dome, the light of the numerous tapers reflecting their glare upon greenful festoons of gayly-colored banners. A conspicuous hung, which was noticed the dual-barred banner of the Supreme Pontiff, emblazoned with the golden keys of St. Peter. The services comprised a high mass of thanksgiving and the "Te Deum Laudamus," in accordance with the order of the Archbishop. The "Te Deum" was sung with great effect by an excellent choir. The pastor, Rev. Father LAURENT, delivered an eloquent address to a comparatively large congregation, considering the inclemency of the weather. He said that all true Catholics, all over the globe, would today rejoice and praise God for having so long preserved the life of so good and great a Pope as Pius IX. In concluding, he trusted that all would fervently pray to God that this wonderful Pontiff may yet be spared to see the rights and prerogatives of the Holy See recognised.

A Curious Letter for a Religious Festival.

The Christian Register, of Saturday last, gives the following letter and sentiment sent to the recent Unitarian festival in Boston by ROBERT S. RANTOUL, of Salem, Mass.:

SALEM, June 1, 1871.

Hon. William T. Davis, President, &c.:

DEAR SIR: I regret that I cannot accept your kind invitation to speak to-night, and I doubt whether I owe it to the fact that I live in Salem, or that I happen to be an officer of our local Conference. Salem ought surely to respond to a call from Plymouth in behalf of Liberalism, for didn't old Rooms COMAFT quit Plymouth and found Salem to enjoy, unmolested, the mode of worship which he particularly liked, and didn't we afterward send down to Plymouth and steal Dr. EMMONS?

Really, we of Essex County have swung so far out on the extreme left wing that I fear I should hardly know how to conduct myself among good, old-fashioned, steady-going Unitarians. Down here we fraternize with anybody who lives in earnest. We believe all that we can see to be true, and get it where we can, and do not feel harshly toward our neighbor because he thinks he sees a little more truth than we, or a little less. We would as soon think of meddling with the contents of another man's pocket-book as with his beliefs.

If I were with you to-night I should desire to say a word on one of those topics which unite men, like religion, rather than those which divide them, like creeds. I mean the Anglo-American Treaty, an act every way worthy of the great free people who have consummated it. The war, to which we contributed Gov. ADAMS, settled it that the English language should be spoken only by freemen. The commission, so to speak, under which Judge HOAR settled it that it shall be spoken only by friends.

And I would offer you this toast: "Our new International Cable between England and America! It has deeper than the ocean, while it spans the heavens, like a bow of promise." Of course it works well, for the President of our National Conference had a hand in laying it. May the Queen's "Peace on Earth," and Gen. GRANT'S "Let us have Peace," shoot back and forth over it forever.

I am very cordially and respectfully yours,
ROBERT S. RANTOUL.

Mr. Stevens Smith:

DEAR SIR: The Serrate-blade "Novelty Lawn Mower" purchased of you last Monday, was tried the same day on the lawn of my residence, at Plainfield, N. J., and really is what its name indicates, a novelty. It moves great and close, if necessary, and, in my judgment, is as far superior to all other Hand Lawn Mowers as the field mower and reaper is to the scythe and cradle.

Yours, truly, CHARLES PLACE.
